About the English translation of this book

I received some years ago the Press-Stimulation Treatment invented by Dr. Momotaro Fujii on the principle of "All diseases are due to one single source" for my chronic stomach and intestinal diseases, from which I suffered continuously for over twenty years, caused after the serious illness of the spinal paralysis affected quite unexpectedly whilst previously resident in London, England. Such heavy suffering had been cured under Dr. Fujii in comparatively short interval, requiring no rest to take, or giving no interference to my daily affairs, or with no restriction to meals, but contrarily recommended to take anything and as adequate as possible.

It has already passed several years since, yet I have been quite strong and able to resist with least fatigue against all trying circumstances of the poverty, which does not permit me to rest even now at the declining age of two years over sixty. In an ecstasy of joy, when the first edition of this book was published by Dr. Fujii, I had the pleasure of contributing an article stating my impressions of his treatment for personal information of sick-people (see page 70 "To Physicians of the World").

Now, Dr. Fujii contemplates to publish the second edition, with addition of an appendix "Jubilant Voices of Patients", being a collection of the notes of impressions contributed to it by various persons of higher name, who experienced his treatment and felt immeasurable gratitude with it as myself, and by rendering the book into English to announce the true value of his treatment widely to physicians in the world as well as to sick-people.

Thereupon, I proposed to undertake the task of the translation so to compensate for the favour I felt of his treatment on one hand, and on the other in my belief that, the attempt to make such marvellous treatment widely known in the world should certainly be taken up by a man like myself, who have had good experiences of it, and it should be also what I ought to do for the sake and increase of social happiness.

With my above proposition, Dr. Fujii has been gratified as just or even more than he wishes, if a man like me who knows well of his treatment should take up the task, and handed to me the original copy on the spot. Such was the reason why I came to tender my little service to the English translation of this book.

But, I must mention that I do not profess to be a man of English literature, and for me, as an outsider of medical profession, it must be a hard job to get through the work satisfactorily, as the book is full of technical names or else some accounts of diseases. With my shallow knowledge of English, I was very much afraid that I should not be able either to meet with the hope of Dr. Fujii put in me or to give much satisfaction to the readers of this book.

Fortunately, however, this was not the book of literature, but for its chief object was to announce widely in the world about the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, therefore I thought it would be sufficient if I could render the original letters and meanings as near as possible in plain English rather than belles-lettres.

With that thought, I have, casting aside my worldly affairs and enduring the difficulties in the work to no small extent, translated word for word literally and in plain language, avoiding to make any alterations or blot-out, even where were thought redundant, repetitional or tautological.

With regard to Oriental or Japanese poems, it is a matter of impossibility with my poor English to render them in regular poetical style, therefore, merely the meaning has been given, and as to the proverbs and metaphors, though there are many similar sayings in Occident, but I thought it would be rather one way of introducing Oriental culture into Occident that I should translate them literally, and in doing so I often found convenient to show out the particular sense of the original writing.

There may be found many words or expressions of my voluntary creation used in various places.

Anyhow, any grammatical mistakes which may be abundant are due to my linguistic inability, and such should be left for some day in future for kind correction of learned men.

I hope the readers will for the present forgive all those errors and mistakes, so long as they could understand through this book what a worldly invention the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment may be valued at, and wish they would get the benefit of it at as an earliest opportunity as possible.

In conclusion, I wish again to appeal to the generosity of the readers to overlook many blemishes that may be abundant throughout the translation, as the reasons I have had to take up the task were such as metioned in the above lines.

PREFACE

SOME time ago, I published a small pamphlet entitled "All diseases are due to one single source" and distributed several hundred copies of it among doctors in Japan, with a view to propagate my new invention of the "Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment", claiming the marvellous efficacy in curing all diseases as dealt with in the pamphlet. Unfortunately, however, whether for the reason that the time was against me or that the spirit of investigation was generally slack in the medical circle, I have not had a single doctor who responded to my solicitude for the favour to come and investigate.

Now it is about two and a half years since the last pamphlet had been issued, and opportunity has turned up somehow favourable so far as to hear the voices even among the medical circles of the whole world, that the modern medical treatment is already run up against wall and that some new treatment is hoped to appear in place of existing ones.

It gives me infinite delight for the sake of human happiness to have been able to observe such a tendency in sight as above. It is indeed for me an opportunity of fortune probably bestowed upon from the heaven, no matter whether it is due to the patients having grown up so much as the better judges of the medical knowledge, or due to the medical practitioners having waken up themselves. Yet, I have not heard of any improved treatment devised so far, such as to compensate well for the defects of the modern treatment or such one as compares with mine ; viz., the “Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment”, which is really more than marvellous in the curing efficacy, whereas simple and to the point in practice, and with several other important features combined the most refined treatment ever devised in the therapeutic circle of the whole world.

Whereupon, I determined, though very busy in the office, and have written this book in order to submit it once more before the gentlemen of the medical profession of the whole world for due consideration, as I felt exceedingly impatient for carrying out my starting wishes to contribute towards the rescue of human being by way of curing all diseases with this new treatment, so far as to make them always free from physical sufferings in earliest opportunity as possible.

Allow me to add a remark in this opportunity that, should the physicians, in spite of their being professionally functional to the rescue of human being from sickness, remain ignorant of this treatment which is just pending in front of their eyes, and which is by far the advanced and the effective compared with their own, without trying to read my pamphlet, or they remain to be indifferent even after glancing over it, I am afraid that such physicians would be bestowed upon sooner or later, from all the patients in the world, with nothing but a disgraceful phrase so far as old and bye-gone treatment.

Hence, I hope most sincerely that any intelligent physicians will immediately read this small book to last of pages, and start to investigate right away on this new treatment, the "Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment," comparing with all other existing ones, including their own, as to their respective qualities, and further hope to be liberal and reflective so much as to listen to the various warning remarks as given in this pamphlet, in the broadest of their mind.

After then, adopting this new treatment and entitled with the qualifications of so-called civilized doctors, I hope they will co-operate with me in the execution of that important duty or object in view to increase the human happiness. The performance of our mutual function should be but for the rescue of human beings from misery of sickness.

Lastly, allow me once more to solicit loudly to all the physicians of the world to hurry up motors under my gate which is always open to investigation.

CHAPTER I

Introduction

(1) I make it object in view to become a saviour of mankind from physical direction.

Finding time in business I have written this small book with a view to enlighten the physicians of the whole world, where the physic or the medical treatment is now a common study all over, with the informations that there is a new treatment invented by me called the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT and that its value of curing efficacy is so great.

The holy priest "Nichiren" and "Jesus Christ" were respectively the saviour of humanity from spiritual or moral direction. I aim at becoming a saviour likewise from physical direction, by rescuing all human being from sickness throwing light upon the existing medical treatments which are so far run up against wall.

(2) Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment can be claimed as the newest and the best treatment ever devised in the world.

I can safely declare that there are no treatments anywhere in the world which are equal to my PRESS-STIMULATION

TREATMENT in the curing efficacy and the simplicity of method. In these respects it is the surpassed and the most advanced of all the existing treatments both medication and non-medication.

I am therefore very anxious to teach this new treatment to all the physicians of the world as quickly as possible, thus to save all the sufferers of sickness from agony who are at present being subjected to a regrettable condition through the inappropriate methods of treatment.

(3) My door is always open to the physicians of the world to visit and investigate.

So far as the medical professions are concerned, their function is to serve for the rescue of human being from sickness, and such rescue should be the prompt and the sure. All who are engaged in the medical professions and desire to be able to effectuate the performance of such function easily and positively for all or any diseases should make their rush to my door immediately, which is always open. The sooner they learn my treatment and become the possessor of the life-giving apparatus of my invention, the surer and quicker they may be able to rescue patients from misery of sickness, and will find themselves placed in a brilliant light like the morning sunshine breaking up the darkness of night in which the modern medical treatments are being enveloped.

(4) Physicians of the world are requested to rend their ears to my words as heavenly voices.

If the physicians would not listen to my heavenly voices and would continue to stick to the practice of their usual medication treatment, they should be prepared for the time to come sooner or later when, to the greatest regret, they will lose the entire confidence in the heart of the patients throughout the world.

Why? Because, if ever my new treatment should be taught to all the people of the world besides the medical professionals, the former would make themselves most readily the good doctors while the latter would have to be left out, right in a reverse state at the same position where the patients had been standing to the doctors.

(5) The treatment with medicines is already a method of by-gone days.

Existence of a medical science or art in this world is of course for the importance of curing diseases, not for discussing about the theory or pathology. In the theoretical side, with regard to the investigation of the cause of a disease such as the pathogenic bacteria etc., the science shows a pretty good progress so far as details to details or particles to micros. But, in the practical side, regarding the curing diseases, it is almost in a state of standstill or run up against wall, showing no material progress. Thus the medical science at large shows no progress, being merely a turn of direction in wrong way or an advance towards reverse direction, again in other words a retrogradation. A truly advanced medical science should be the such as it has positive efficacy in curing when applied in the practical treatment of disease, and further a practicable throughout ages absolutely conforming to the natural laws with least hitch or liability to frequent alterations in course of time.

To speak of the progress of the modern medical treatment is rather a sort of quibble. Let me point out again that the modern medical men do touch little with that important function of rescuing human being from sickness, but are seized too much with the investigation of some particular branches in theoretical details, and in a rather prejudicial manner as if neglecting that fundamental aim of practical treatment for human happiness. It looks like the science for the science's sake, and not for the practical art of saving human lives, that they are absorbed in. So the progress is almost always on top of the science and not on general medical treatment.

However proud they may be of the daily progress being made in the science and art of the medical treatment, such progress is merely the course to reach to the truth of nature which is very far away, therefore the thing considered the newest to-day may be the oldest to-morrow. Repeating same thing thus round, medical treatment is no wonder always liable to "run up against wall."

On the contrary, the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT is such a perfectly natural and a most scientific treatment from all directions, like a "heaven-made clothes," which is equitable and suitable always for every one of humanity with least fear of running up against wall. In applying it for practical treatment the curing power is so miraculously great and sure that there is none to compare with it. As it is really a so advanced treatment, should the people besides the professionals ever be taught with this treatment they would become no more to ask for usual medication treatment.

(6) Don't talk about the progress of medical art before investigating the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

When I say so as above, there would be a good many doctors who are prejudicially one-sided and think with doubt that, however may the medical treatment meet with a dead-lock how could it be possible to believe in such a word as above, as long as the fundamental science of physic is developing so far in these days. Such doctors neither know what my treatment is nor did ever attempt to investigate. It is absurd to look upon anything with the eyes of suspicion of which one has least knowledge.

(7) To establish on the basis of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is the very means to the true refined treatment.

However great the progress of the science of the fundamental physic might have been, the science is science remaining all the same. Prompt cure of diseases could not be possible by that way. Hence I feel most impatient for teaching my best reliable treatment to all the physicians of the world by all means available, and thus to establish a true powerful art of curing diseases all over the world. It is quite plain that the medical treatment which is now run up against wall will thus find the wall removed forever and a new road will be open before it, illuminated with this new treatment, and the medical science may then be developed for its true aim by making this new treatment the fresh basis of the study, as for the sake of human being instead of science for science's sake as is so nowadays. Further, it is quite certain that the physicians would thus feel thankful so much as to find a boat when reached up to the river to cross over or to find a light in darkness, and the patients in the world would also welcome with gratitude as if one gets the water in thirst or the food in hunger. I am not indulging in idle-talk, but what I declare is based on accurate facts.

(8) What shall I do then, if all the physicians of the world absolutely refuse to listen to my voices ?

The reason why I decided to make such suggestion as above so loudly to all the physicians of the world is solely due to my sincere wishes to make them live on the footing more than ever efficient and revered. Moreover, I believe in that the professionals could be taught with this new treatment much easier than the non-professionals, and that in this way the rescue of all sufferers of sickness in the world may be brought about readier than in the other way.

(9) Or, should I teach all the non-professionals to make them good doctors ?

Inspite of my kind advice as above, should the physicians of the world absolutely refuse to listen to me, I would be compelled, though very reluctant, to stand up against and by all means endeavour to teach all the people of the world besides the professionals to become excellent doctors, as this treatment is so simple and easy to learn.

I sincerely hope the medical professionals of the world will pay due consideration on this matter after going through the following chapters.

CHAPTER II

Self-awakening of Patients

(1) The Great War caused revolutions on the cultures of the world.

The Great War was not only the war between men and men, nations and nations, but its influence was terribly wide and has given a great shock to the various circles such as thought, religion, finance, art, literature and medical art, etc.

The war had ceased with the revolution of Russia and the German defeat, but the fight between the old and the new ideas, the genuine and the counterfeit, and the revolutionary change in the inner social life in all directions became ever more intense. About fourteen years have elapsed since the war had ceased, and now it compels every nation to hurry waking up and bringing forth fundamental reforms in all directions, both spiritual and material, with the work of the restoration. Such phenomena in sight may be a good prospect for the happiness of mankind.

(2) Modern medical treatment as seen from patients' side.

Among many things on which the world's nations have recently waken up, the most conspicuous is on the subject of sanitation, or the medical science and the curing art. This fact often appears on newspapers, periodicals and books. It is really a congratulatory event for all mankind.

Without going into scientific details I will enumerate herein some of the patients' voices as appeared on newspapers, periodicals and books, referring to discontents or dissatisfactions, desires or demands, against the modern medical treatment, with addition of those coming to my ears direct.

Why I do this? Because such informations as coming from the patients, who have been in daily touch with the medicines, would benefit the physicians in the way to interest, stimulate, or instruct them much better than such scientific informations or essays, which would have no value in use for the practical treatment.

If the physicians of the world should reflect on those informations and make it a food for study, happiness of the patients would be immense.

Now let me give some of those informations in the following paragraphs :—

(3) Patients' cries are the first step to the reformation of the medical art.

Patient A says :—

“To the question whether the modern medical art has advanced or not, a healthy people would answer at once to the effect that it has advanced so far as can be seen. Such a people is observing it only from the surface of it. A sick man would reply that it is a great mistake to judge it from the surface, because a truly advanced treatment should be such as the simplest in the treatment and the surest in the cure, whereas the modern medical treatment is so complicated and exaggerated requiring a number of different specialists to attend to a single patient affected with different diseases, besides it has many other defects which can be detected only when one gets sickness and ask for treatment. The proof of the pudding is in its eating. I myself, before getting sickness, never thought of so many defects it would have possessed, but once after getting sickness have found that the modern medical treatment is unreliable, and it is not only far from advanced but has several defects, and that the words of the above sick people are absolutely true."

(4) Patients who are groaning with despair.

Patient B says :—

"Try and ask every one of the patients who come to a hospital to receive medical treatment if he is or not coming pleasingly to the hospital every day with a bit of consciousness of getting better. Perhaps a majority of such patients would give you replies in the negative, and would say that not only far from being conscious of getting better but are very trying to come to the hospital every day forcing the sick body, yet cannot do otherwise as there are no other places to ask for treatment, therefore simply come and take a chance."

(5) When receiving medical treatment should be careful not to take cold.

Patient C says :—

"After lying in bed from sickness for a long time, one feels pain or dullness at the back or shoulder, or stiffness of the abdomen, or weariness of the legs. However you may appeal to a physician to cure such ailments he has no appropriate means to cure such ailments at once, but would only tell you to leave it alone until the pains would get relieved naturally in course of time as they are almost common occurrence after a long sickness in bed, therefore no worry about it. There would be none sillier than the modern physicians who do not know how to cure such almost common ailments right soon. Not only that, by calling in doctors one often catches cold as the result of exposing the chest or back for examination, whereas none of the benefits could have been expected in doing so.

In such a case as above, our ancient physicians of good name applied at once the treatment of acupuncture or moxibustion to remove the pains anyhow, besides the usual medication. I fancy our ancient physicians being rather handy in this respect."

(6) Modern medical art cannot do any more than changing acute diseases into chronic.

Patient D says:—

"Everybody when he has any ailment goes to a physician because he wishes to have it removed before making it a chronicity.

Why in the world there are almost countless number of people suffering from chronic disease? According to the statistics taken by some expert, there are 1 chronic sufferers to a family of 5 persons, but in fact almost all the rest are also the sufferers only differing in the degree of pains whether bearable or unbearable.

If the modern physic would be a such as can cure the sickness whilst in the acute stage, there cannot be such a great number of chronic sufferers. It shows apparently the proof of the physicians' inability, and a disgrace of them.

The modern physicians cannot cure even acute diseases satisfactorily, no wonder why they cannot cure the chronics, hence so many sick people. That is also the reason why so many varieties of other treatments besides the medication appear.

Again in short, unless the modern physicians should try and find out how to cure all diseases or ailments correctly and promptly before leading them to chronicity, they cannot be escaped from the criticism such as given in the head remark of the present paragraph."

(7) If it is not possible to take the statistics and tabulate the number of the patients cured and killed by the physicians?

Patient E says :—

"Physicians being no god, they cannot help making mistakes, hence might kill patients innocently sometimes, such as by wrong operations, miscompounding of medicines or overdosing etc.

If by some means we could take statistics, we are sure that the patients thus lose their lives will aggregate to a very great number in a year. Thinking of this I cannot but arouse suspicions as to the probabilities of the patients killed by the physicians in consequence of the miscompounding, the secondary reaction of the medicines or the wrong identity etc., would not be greater than those cured. So much as this, danger is involved in the diagnosis of the modern medical treatment.

I hope some day in near future the physicians will altogether discard all such medicines which might bring about injuries, and devise some other new treatment which is quite safe, curing all diseases in the most natural way and in the shortest interval as possible. Then the humanity would become free of such uneasiness as being entertained now towards the modern medical treatment, and further all of us would become making it a sort of pleasure to go and receive medical help immediately when get sickness. We the patients are looking forward with great anxiety to such a time as above should soon turn up."

(8) Modern medical treatment as seen from female patients.

Female patient F says :—

Not speaking of the diseases for which there is no alternative but surgical operation, let me criticize in regard to the modern medical treatment for female and juvenile diseases, from female standpoint. Look at the treatment of a specialist on infant and female patients, then you will distinctly notice that the modern treatment is cruel and primitive.

Let us take for instance first the treatment for the infant at breast. Generally speaking, in Europe I understand the physician does not give any medicines to an infant especially one at breast, because medicines are too strong and injurious for such an infant, but gives something else instead such as tea, etc., thus leaving it alone and taking a chance. However loud the infant may cry or appeal, the physician does not know what to do."

(9) How cruel and primitive is the pediatrics !

Female patient F continues :—

“Next, look at the treatment for grown up children. When the children have the bowels not in order, physicians almost as a rule give purgative or rectal injection, or if there be troubles in the nose or the throat, they paractise the operation in the nose or burn in the throat at once. Most of the children hate these operations, but it is quite frequent that we witness the physicians forcibly accomplish the operations or force to take medicines in spite of the children refusing strenuously by shutting their mouths with the hands.

Just imagine when any medicines given after so much toil would have done no good for the children, or possibly have left the secondary reaction in the persons of the children, or have made the sickness worse or even might have killed the patients in consequence of the secondary reaction, miscompounding or wrong identity, etc.

Considering carefully on these points, it cannot be too much to say that the modern medical treatment is cruel and even primitive. They seem to have neglected to investigate further to improve it for the happiness of humanity, or to devise some more effective way of treatment, simple and natural, using no injurious medicines, requiring no purgative, rectal injection, or the operation even for suppurated nose, thus even for the children can get it cheerfully and pleasingly instead of being forced to get it in such a cruel manner as for the mothers often hard to witness.”

(10) The endoscopy or office consultation for female patients is no more than a violation of chastity.

Female Patient F further continues :—

“Next, let us look at the treatment for adult females. Should the modern physicians possess more spirit of inquiry in regard to the female treatment and comprehend the psychologic state of mind of the females when sit for office consultation or cleansing the womb, which is not at all a pleasant thing, the physicians should endeavour to find other ways to avoid these practices, especially when there is no absolute necessity lying in the practice,—it is no better than the violation of chastity or a children’s play. In spite of this, the modern gynæcology is always accompanied by the office consultation and the cleansing to my greatest disgust.”

(11) The acupuncture and the moxibustion are better than the modern medical treatment.

Female patient G says :—

“I know there are in Japan from ancient times the acupuncture and the moxibustion, the former by puncturing a needle into the body through the skin and the latter burning the moxa over the skin cure all female troubles, avoiding such rude treatment as the office consultation and the cleansing of the womb.

The scientific reasons regarding the efficacy of these treatments are not quite clear so far, but the three effects of the induction, the stimulation and the subsidence of the nervous actions had been ascertained by certain doctors. Apart from any scientific reasons, these treatments are considered far more agreeable for female patients than the modern physic. For this reason these treatments are being continuously practised in Japan ever since one thousand years as the best popular treatments.”

(12) Though the acupuncture and the moxibustion are conspicuous in the curative effect for certain diseases but are still defective in the method of treatment.

Female patient H says:—

“Puncturing a needle into the human body or burning moxa on the skin is also cruel, especially for infants and children. In this point they cannot be called the accomplished treatments.

But, by the existence of these treatments it is sufficiently proved that there are other ways of treatment for female troubles better than medication, surgical operation, office consultation or cleansing, all of which are hated so much by the female patients.

I wonder why the world's physicians do not undertake to investigate further on the Japanese acupuncture and moxibustion so as to improve the methods. If they should have succeeded in this, it would do a great goodness for the human beings. I have never heard the doctors attempting this.

It cannot be too much to say that the modern medical treatment is of a very cruel and primitive from female standpoint, and it requires a gross amendment from its starting point.”

(13) Modern physicians treat the human body like an engineer deals with the machines or tools to repair.

Patient I says:—

“In case of house building you may be well to divide the works into several branches of specialties such as planning, civil engineering, architectural, etc. So with automobile manufactures and repairing.

But the human body is an organic being possessed with the flesh and the spirit, and the nerves and the blood, all related together. If you hit the flesh it feels pain or if you sever it the blood will bleed out. In repairing the human body it must differ fundamentally in principle as well as in process from the repairing of houses or machineries."

(14) Increase of the division of the special branches of the medical arts means degradation and self-ruin of the arts.

Patient J says :—

"The modern medical art has already been divided into so many branches of specialties and has the tendency to increase in the branches still more, so many as the number of the parts of a bicycle or an automobile.

On one hand it may look like making a progress, but on the other, if you look into it carefully, you will see that so much as the special branches increase the modern medical treatment will come more and more deadlocked, parting away gradually from humanity thus finally step up to self-ruin."

(15) The modern medical treatment, so complicated and exaggerated as it is, is going forward but in a reverse direction from civilization.

Patient K says :—

"In true civilization, everything should become simple and to the point. Take medical treatment for instance, when the physician would become a master of all things, or in other words, with one method or instrument become able to cure all diseases, you may regard it then a highly advanced and most refined treatment.

Contrary to this, if the special branches increase in number more and more as time advances, and the patients would have to consult many specialists about their sicknesses more than ever, they would not have afforded to spend time and money thereby run up, whereas the struggle of existence would have become keener and keener as the time goes on, making people busier. Such is apparently adverse to the progress of civilization."

(16) Truly civilized medical treatment should be the such as simple and to the point.

Patient L says :—

"Taking it for granted that there appears a great invention with which almost all diseases can be cured by one physician with one single instrument, there should be no wonder at seeing numerous patients gather from all over the world around such treatment, because such would be the most improved and truly civilized treatment.

Therefore I may say that the complexity but with poor substances means decline or self-ruin, whereas the simplicity after strict refining represents the highest grade of civilization."

(17) Many important items the patient shall have to look out.

Patient M says :—

"Whenever a patient goes to a physician for consultation, he must not forget to inquire with the physicians what is the disease he is suffering from, also how many days it will likely take to get relieved from the disease, or the prognostic presumption as it is called.

The physician ought to tell the patient with the prognosis even when no such questions as above are placed with him by the patient, unless for some reason or other it is better not to tell.

I wonder why in most cases the physician does not give accurate answers to the questions even when there are no special reasons to deny. Perhaps because in such case he has no sufficient confidence in his own diagnosis and treatment."

(18) Actual proof of the physicians having no confidence in their own treatment.

Patient N says:—

"In case a physician has any one of his own family affected with sickness, he ought to attend by himself such patient to treat as long as he possesses full confidence in his own treatment, instead of asking other physicians to attend, because his own family is the dearest of all and must be taken care of to the best of his ability.

Contrary to this, in almost every case he asks for other physicians' consultation, certainly because he cannot have the patient in his family cured with his own treatment."

(19) Before taking the medicines given by a physician you must always ascertain the prescription and each chemical contained therein, otherwise you would not be absolutely safe.

Patient O says:—

“Mr. N. is quite right and it is just what I wanted to say. To take the medicines prescribed by such a physician who has no confidence in himself even in the treatment of his own family would be rather risky. We must be careful to ascertain the contents before taking it. Wrong identity, miscompounding or excessive dose is often liable to cause some serious mishaps.

In most cases when the physicians would tell you frankly the details of their prescriptions, the medicines are almost such as do you neither good nor bad, or such as you will get rather more benefited by not taking them at all.

Arguing about so far, the necessity of the existence of medical profession in this world becomes doubtful. By the existence of hospitals many a patient are misled or killing their lives.

Therefore, I should advise the people of the world to become awakened as early as possible, and whenever get sickness should not rely upon the professionals always, who have little self-confidence even in their own treatment, but by all means try and discover for their own benefit some method or instrument with which to cure diseases with their own hands.

Why? Because, it is not the medical professionals who know best, but it is the patients themselves who know their own sickness best.”

(20) One practice is better than thousand knowledges.

From the patients' cries as enumerated so far in the foregoing paragraphs the readers of this book would have been able to know quite well in what respects of the modern medical treatment the sick people are dissatisfied and are demanding improvements.

In short, the patients of to-day have waken up and are demanding towards the physicians in the world at the top of their voices to investigate and devise such a way or an instrument as always ensurable for the quick and positive cure of diseases in an easy and comfortable manner, rather than the numerous theories or essays as they are indulged in.

(21) Waking up of the world's physicians awaited.

I sincerely hope the physicians of the world for the sake of the sick people or mankind at large, that they will turn to all of the above remarks seriously and set out at once to investigate and find out some new treatment which can be ensurable for the quick and positive cure, as said before, without using any medicines which are most risky things.

I shall be gratified if the physicians of the world will soon wake up.

Let me quote here a sarcasm made by the well-known philosopher Mr. Oliver Wendell Holmes hundred years ago:—

“If all the medicines that had ever been taken by mankind were thrown into the sea, it would be much better for mankind and much worse for the fish.”

CHAPTER III

All diseases are due to one single source

(1) Patients are the buyers or the customers while the physicians are the sellers of a merchandize, the medical treatment.

It is needless to say that the patients are the names given to the persons who are unwell, and the physicians are the ones who treat and cure diseases of those unwell persons. The relation between these two is just like the relation between the customers and the merchants, and it is not because there are the sellers of the medical art started first that the buyers have appeared, but it was the buyers or the patients who appeared first to seek for a remedy, whereupon the physicians must have started their business for the sake of the patients.

Hence, the more the patient or the customer increases, the more the business of the physicians would prosper. Patients are the customers under whose auspices the business of the physicians can exist.

(2) Coarse and over-manufactures with empty contents are the modern medical art.

Taking it for granted that the medical art is like a merchandise, and if such merchandise is of a coarse and careless manufacture very liable to deteriorate in course of time in spite of a very beautiful label pasted on it, what would you think of it?

Furthermore, in ancient times you could purchase anything you wanted from one store, but nowadays you would have to purchase a few things shopping along several houses in consequence of the division of labour according to the variety of articles. What an awkwardness you are facing at!

The more the civilization progresses the more the coarse and over-manufactures prevail instead of a better and substantial articles suitable always for the practical use, and the more the human intellect develops the more the things are made troublesome and complicated instead of being made simpler. I may say that the modern medical art is now in the conditions similar to the above stated. How long would the customers or the patients endure under such conditions?

(3) If physicians should ignore the voices of the patients they would have to ruin themselves sooner or later.

Hence it is quite natural and reasonable that there sprung up such complaints and demands as afore-stated from the mouths of the patients against the modern medical art. Unless, therefore, the physicians or the sellers of the medical art wake up at this juncture, the patients or the customers would be compelled to go shopping around elsewhere in order to find more refined one.

“Danger comes soonest when it is despised,” especially so in these days when competition is so keen all over, and it is quite possible that there might appear some revolutionary invention of the medical art so as to satisfy wants of the groaning patients throughout the world.

(4) I wonder what investigations the Japanese physicians have been indulged in?

If it should happen that the aforesaid assumption comes to reality and the patients go elsewhere for shopping, there would be no doubt that the present physicians should be compelled to close up their shops.

Every night I close up my eyes in a dark quiet midnight for a deep thinking of the above consequences in regard to the future of the modern medical art, I could not help feeling in sympathy with the poor physicians.

It had led me at last to make up my mind to devise some ways, with all means and efforts, with which to become able to work as an ally with the physicians on one hand, and as the supplier of such article as required by the patients on the other, thus to contribute for the happiness of mankind at large. With this in view I had devoted whole of my time since over fifteen years without a moment rest, regardless of my own health, for the study and discovery of a new and improved medical art, and at last after innumerable difficulties and pains have succeeded to devise the new treatment complying to all the requirements. Whereupon I published on July 10th, 1925, a small pamphlet entitled "All diseases are due to one single source" and distributed several hundred copies by post among the universities and colleges of physic, and noted hospitals and physicians, for their investigations and criticism.

To my greatest disappointment, not a single word had been responded to from these professionals, like a thunderbolt into the sea or a cannon shot in the air. Thus my efforts have been in vain so far. I wonder what investigations the Japanese physicians had been indulged in at the time, while the most important function of the physicians must be but the investigations or discovery of a new and reliable treatment for the sake of human happiness. My last writing was not such as indulged in any complicated theories, or of a logical pass-time, or even of a pedantic argument, but was a plain and explicit account of the facts I experienced for many years, yet the medical professionals might have thought as offended. If so, they have not been correct. What it may, I have been shocked with no small despair at the attitude and the lack of investigating spirit on the part of the modern physicians.

In the next paragraph I will give the summaries of the contents of my last pamphlet.

(5) Summaries from my last pamphlet “All diseases are due to one single source” sent to all the noted physicians throughout Japan.

All beasts know by instinct how to take care of themselves or to protect their lives from attack of others, thus want to maintain their lives for permanent. By the natural laws, however, the strong preys on the weak consequently all cannot live for permanent. Human being, being the superior and the most powerful among the living creatures, prey on animals, birds and fishes etc., but never yield their own flesh for the prey of those creatures.

Thus, can human being enjoy a permanent life? Never, because there are many reasons which make them weak and die in early ages, or naturally die in consequence of senility. It is very seldom to survive for over a hundred years old.

Weakness and senility are the two great enemies for the human lives. The existence of these enemies are not visible to the human eyes, but at any time they eat into human body and eat up the lives. There are nothing more dreadful than these enemies for the human existence.

In order to protect from the attack of or to expel these enemies there are several ways and means investigated, and those who are specially engaged in these investigations are called physicians. Besides the physicians there are also many other people who are engaged in these investigations. The ways and means which have been established and are prevailing are roughly as follows:—

(a) Medical treatment: Physicians practise this treatment, but to suppress the enemies as above stated use medicines solely or chiefly. Quite recently some physician claimed to have discovered a surgical treatment referring to interchanging of certain organisms, but this is still far from practicable.

(b) Acupuncture and moxibustion: These people treat at the peripheric nerves, thus they know can cure many diseases, but they practise these treatments only traditionally and do never try further investigations. Hence the perfection is yet far to reach at.

(c) Spiritualistic treatment: Of these there are various methods; viz., prayers, incantations, hypnotism, and various other spiritual treatments. These may do good some of the believers but little effect to non-believers.

(d) Temporary treatments: Such as hot sand bathing, electric treatment of all kinds, rays-bathing etc., may do good but only for the temporary.

All the above treatments have more or less curative efficacy upon certain diseases, hence there are patients who want these treatments, and the professionals who practise these as for their business.

As for business, they naturally want to make profit out of it, as the result of which they are apt to propagate their own largely as if the best, or sometimes cheat the patients incurable as if curable, or entrap each other amongst themselves, etc. Such are the common evils in the modern treating circle.

Being lack of the discriminating knowledge, many a patient are misled by the physicians' words and vainly groaning in sick bed incured or often have lost their lives through improper treatments.

6 An excellent physician can rescue the country but an unskillful kills the people.

The most unreliable thing is the treatment of physicians. For the reason that the physicians are vested with that great function of protecting human health, the Government provide strict laws and restrict the granting licence to any one unless pass the specified examinations. However, every one differs in the ability, some being able and some not, as the Japanese old saying "An excellent physician can rescue the country but an unskillful kills the people." I regret to say that an excellent physician is very few in number while all the rest are the unskillful, hence it is very unreliable.

Everybody knows the gunpowder is a thing very dangerous, but it cannot be without when we are to protect the country from attack of enemies. So with the physicians. However unreliable they may be, having no better alternative people ask for their treatments whenever get sickness.

In ancient times the medical art was considered a benevolent profession. Even unskillful physicians had scarcely money in view, but engaged in their profession with all the heart and efforts for the saving of the people from sickness.

Now-a-days there cannot be detected a man who would have become a physician to do a bit of benevolence for his aim, but almost all set out from the beginning of school life making it for their ultimate aim to obtain material rewards.

As long as the self-existence or self-subsistence is the essential item of the modern ages, physicians only cannot be blamed at for asking material rewards in order to subsist on their own occupation, but they must not be unfaithful anyhow to their occupation or function.

By virtue of that important function of saving human being from sickness, the physicians are ranked among the high class of occupations. Therefore they ought to be faithful to their function, attending always promptly and as much as possible in person for the rescue whenever asked for by the patients even for perilous diseases, indifferently to their own affair, doing top of their best. In case they find it beyond the reach of their own ability, should recommend at once other proper treatments or abler physicians to attend instead. Such are the faithful performance of their functions. I wonder how many physicians would be there now-a-days who are so faithful like that.

All people have their respective occupations, therefore none but the physicians can afford to devote solely for the study of the medical science and art. For this reason people generally give too much credit upon these physicians, especially when they were granted licence, as if they have acquired all and every knowledge of medical treatment.

Taking advantage of the patients being thus ignorant of the physic, physicians often give a fake treatment with a view to conceal their own incapability or simply for the purpose of making profit. This is also one of the reasons why the physicians attempt not to show the prescriptions to the patients.

Though the medical art is said to have made a high progress now-a-days, but the number of sick people and early death have never decreased, but adversely increased as compared with those of the ancient. It might have advanced more or less in technics, but such cannot be called the progress of medical art in general.

By progress is meant steps or course of transition. Whatever progress the modern medical art may be said to have made by an inch or even a foot every time and each step, the field of diseases is boundlessly extensive, and the efforts to make the progress up to its ultimate boundary will be in vain after all. Unless the time comes when we can find no diseases incurable throughout the world, we cannot say the progress has been made. Is there anyone in the modern medical circle daring in view to achieve such a great deed?

The physicians of these days know nothing but the medicines to cure diseases with, as if one knows the guns to fight with but not of other useful ammunitions. Throwing away the bows and arrows, have adopted the guns, thus they think to have made an advance, while there is already an invention appeared to throw down from airships by far the more powerful explosives. How silly and pitiful they are!

Just throw your eyes open upon the growing plants. They are seen with several injuries inflicted upon the trunks, but are growing on as well without being disheartened. Sometimes we find a decomposition sustained deep in the heart of the trunks, but even then they effect self-repairing. The trees insensible as they are can do that, why the human being cannot do the same?

Now look at the swimming fishes and flying birds. They look always well and happy, and seldom we see them in sickness. Do they know sanitation or precaution against sickness? It is worthy of further investigations.

(7) There would be no danger of being affected with sickness if you could keep your nerve actions properly stimulated.

Try and visit the menageries and look at the animals seized in the cages. There you will see all the animals are never resting but moving about all the time, that is, they are to keep their nerve actions stimulated by means of the exercise. If the nerves are kept properly stimulated, the functions of all organs and the blood circulation will be adjusted normally, by which the health can be maintained. Animals seem to understand the sanitation.

Again, you will see the animals licking their bodies whenever injured or inflicted with wounds, often in so much terrible condition as exposing red flesh. They repeat the licking constantly, persevering the painfulness of touching the wounded place. Such is the mode of self-treatment the animals know by instinct or learned by experience. They realize anyhow that, by thus stimulating the nerves at the wounded region, they can get the wounds healed up.

The nerves are spreading all over the human body, generating from the brain as the headquarters, and through the spine which is the redoubt. Motor, sense, blood, cells, and everything else in the human body are governed by these nerves. The increase and decrease of the red and white blood corpuscles are also being governed by the nerves. Nerves are the king of the castle of human body.

Human body is a castle or a fort, and any local diseases are the breakage of the part of the castle. Such a breakage can be readily repaired by the hands of the officers working under the command of the king. No other helps or commands are needed. So with the local diseases of the human body, which can be cured easily by giving the nerves a command to act in a proper order. No other helps or medicines are necessary.

The modern physicians do not consider on this point, but they are trying to repair such a local breakage from inside of the body by means of the medication which would not do much good but give more or less secondary reactions. Almost as a rule they advise their patients not to take exercise, or at the worst prohibit food to take before getting better, consequence of which would be the weakened nerves never get restored to the normal. There is a Japanese saying, "Wanted to make the horn straight killed the cow."

(8) The radical cause why the modern medical arts have run up against wall.

It is fundamentally mistaken and scientifically adverse way to try to cure diseases from inside of the body. Because, the nerves are classified into three kinds, the motor, the sensory, and the sympathetic nerves, and they are scattered all over the body, and those in the various organs inside of the body are chiefly the motor nerves, which actions are governed by the sensory nerves, which are scattered chiefly adjacent under the skin, acting always in concert with the inside motor nerves. Brain is the headquarter of all these three nerves.

Of all these nerves, the most important, so far as my investigation goes with reference to all local diseases, are sensory nerves scattered all over under the skin. They are practically the king of kings, by whose command the motor nerves inside are waken up and work, and the blood circulation is regulated. Their functions are very great and important, so much as the human life is maintained largely by these sensory nerves.

Now, you will see that in the modern medical treatment they want to give a “wake-up” to the motor nerves inside the body by the influence of medicines, just same as an order is issued from outsider to the officers, who would not listen to such an order unless issued by a proper commander. It is absolutely the reverse and unnatural way. The most natural way of treatment should be to treat from outside the skin, where the sensory nerves are located and thence the command has to be right immediately delivered to the motor nerves inside through the brain. Thus the sure and speedy cure could be effected.

Without understanding this natural truth, the modern physicians are exerting in vain to cure diseases from inside of the body by means of medicines or other things foreign to the human body. Unless they should correct such fundamental errors and make a fresh start, the more they investigate the more they would approach to the wall.

Any local diseases can hardly be called the diseases of particular names. But, such as hemiplegia and infantile paralysis can be called the diseases, having their cause to the abnormality of the headquarter nerves. It is as though a child not yet born or a chick still in the shell of an egg. Unless they are born the proper names cannot be given.

(9) All diseases are due to tardiness or slackness of nervous actions.

Whatever remote causes a disease might have been due to, it is not very important matter to argue upon. There would be no diseases as long as the normal function of the nerves can be kept unchanged or kept up in the normal. All diseases are due to the nerve actions losing normal activity or causing a hypostatic condition. This is why I insist upon "All diseases are due to one single source."

Recently there appeared some physicians who advanced a new theory, that he can cure all diseases by way of stimulating the cells so as to increase the number of white blood corpuscles. He advocates an injection of albumen so as to give the stimulation. He is still wandering along within the sphere of medicinal treatment and cannot get out of it.

The Acupuncture and the Moxibustion, which were first brought to this country from China in ancient times, are the capital treatments amongst all other similar ones in existence, so far as the stimulation, the induction, and the subsidation of the nerves are concerned. But they are regretted of being rather cruel in the treatment. Men of no courage or perseverance dare to receive these treatments. Therefore they are still far from perfect.

Notwithstanding the above defect, they have good curing effects. Therefore, the Government allow licences in the shape of sub-doctors to the practisers who pass the specified examinations. However, these people only practise the treatments blindly as taught, but never turn to think there would be a still better method for stimulating the nerves.

Sensibility of a nerve is so instant like an electricity. A slightest touch will give it a marvellous stimulation. So, there must be some other simpler method for obtaining same effects than with the acupuncture, the moxibustion, the medicinal injections, or the electric current.

If there should have been discovered such a method as all diseases can be cured in a simple manner and a long life may be enjoyable, it would be the greatest happiness for human being. Why should we not attempt to investigate it?

(10) All diseases can be cured without failure, if an abnormal condition of the nerves could have been restored to a normal.

With the firm belief in the above-mentioned theory, I had continued strenuous investigations for over fifteen years, and at last succeeded to discover a therapeutic instrument with which to effect the restoration of the abnormalized nervous activities into the normal condition. First I had tried on my own body for many years and severally, thus ascertained the right places where and how to apply it according to the nature of diseases and their localities. After that, I have experienced on numerous patients, and found the effects were sure and almost instant as I first expected, blood circulation becoming prosperous noticeably whilst the treatment is going on, besides the following effects:—

- (a) Feverish condition subsides almost instantly.
- (b) Pains of whatever nature removed.
- (c) Coldness, numbness cured.

Furthermore,

- (d) Appetite returns and increases.
- (e) Sleep well.
- (f) Resistance of the skin increases.

All the effects as above-given are the ones which were ever considered in the modern medical treatments hard to achieve successfully.

(11) The fact that one single instrument cures all diseases is the sufficient proof that "All diseases are due to one single source."

The use of the instrument is quite simple, thus :—

In the first place, examine the patients and determine at where the instrument has to be applied according to the diseases. This instrument has been patented in Japan, England, Germany, and France, and is still pending for the U. S. A.*

The way of applying this instrument is simply to press it using a slight power direct over the skin. That is all to be done. Yet, it will give the numerous important effects as given before in a most natural way, such as the stimulation, the invigoration, and the regulation of the nerve action, consequently the purification as well as the healthy circulation of the blood. Thus, it cures all diseases and has the following benefits :—

- (a) No fear of injuring the skin or the flesh.
- (b) Gives no painful feeling whatever,
- (c) but rather a sense of pleasure, because one will notice the diseases getting better treatment after treatment.

Also,

- (d) No belief is necessary in receiving this treatment, as in the case of many spiritual treatments.
- (e) Not much time required.
- (f) No secondary reactions whatever as in the case of medicines.

There are no treatments in the world which can be compared with this new treatment in its being almost sure and instantaneous in the effect of curing all diseases, also in its three actions of the increase of the health, the regulation of the systems, and the purification of the blood, being effected at the same time and in the natural way.

* Just after type-setted, received a letter from U. S. A. Patent Office Board of Appeal, under date of April 19th, 1929, giving decision patent allowable.

For the reasons given so far above, I am in the firm belief that this treatment is entirely a new, and the most perfectly rational, and an ideal treatment ever found in the world, thereby named it the "FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT."

Facts have proved sufficiently that "All diseases are due to one single source."

Poems (in Chinese) sent to me from some of the patients in approbation of my new treatment:—

CHAPTER IV

Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

SPECIAL FEATURES I.

THAT, as explained repeatedly in the foregoing paragraphs, no medicines of any kind are necessary in this treatment, hence there are no such anxieties as in the case of medication treatments, which latter being good on one hand but injurious on the other, producing secondary reactions etc.

This treatment is absolutely harmless and safest, being perfectly natural as well as scientific in its principle and application.

THAT, as this treatment is absolutely natural, and is such as it gives to the human body only so much stimulation as adequate to invite the nerves to restore their activities, to such an extent as normal to the human body, there is no harm whatever in treating on anybody especially female patients for any diseases, even during the pregnancy with least fear of causing miscarriage. Such female patients can warrantably enjoy easy delivery, if they receive timely treatments during the pregnancy.

SPECIAL FEATURES II.

THAT, this treatment never gives the patients any painful or uncomfortable feeling whilst being treated. Even babies can pleasingly receive this treatment. Not only that, this treatment can treat a certain sickness solely for that sickness, and the complications feared to set in are prevented in the course of the treatment. Take for instance, a child who is affected with the scarlet fever, and is feared, as is usual with such disease, to have other complications setting in, such as acute pneumonia, acute nephritis, or serious brain affections. This treatment can be applied at the same time and in a very short interval, to prevent positively such complications from setting in, thus I can treat the patient for the scarlet fever solely for that sickness.

THAT, when a pregnant female begins to labour and the labour pains are unbearable, this treatment can be exercised, and the pains can be instantly removed, and the delivery becomes very easy, also the after-birth gets easier.

THAT, when a woman during the menstruation is affected with the stomach or any other troubles, she can receive this treatment for those diseases, without any interference with the menstruation, free of the fear of causing the retention or any other bad consequences.

THAT, if the bloody secretion is due to other causes than the menstruation, such as the female troubles, or of entirely other nature, such as acute catarrh of the colon or other names, can stop the secretion and cure the diseases with two or three times treatments, if attended to the patient in the early stage.

THAT, for the above reason, with this treatment we can easily ascertain whether the bloody secretion is due to the natural cause of the menstruation or some other morbid causes.

SPECIAL FEATURES III.

THAT, in almost all cases of illness, there precedes or accompanies pain, spasm, itching, languishness, and or high temperature, any one of which making patients uncomfortable and unbearable. However, if we could take off all or any of these ailments speedily and easily, the illness would get less hard to bear, or would be cured entirely. When any of these ailments are of acute nature, and wherever it may be located in the body, with this treatment we can easily and almost instantaneously remove them. Therefore, if this treatment should have been applied whilst these ailments were yet in the acute stage, all diseases would have been cured before making them into the chronicity.

THAT, as the chief feature of my treatment is that any and all diseases are curable whilst in the acute stage without prolonging the cure, people would be always free from long illness or chronicity, if treated immediately when they feel some troubles or morbid symptoms.

SPECIAL FEATURES IV.

THAT, for all chronic diseases or ailments this treatment is also effective. But in the chronic diseases one or two times treatments would not be sufficient to expect complete cure. They may come back some time later. In such case the patients should continue this treatment till get quite well.

THAT, as this treatment is absolutely natural in its curing effects, and is perfectly radical, diseases will never come back again after once cured.

THAT, in this treatment, unlike the electric treatment, no electric current or anything of that kind is used, but the skin is pressed with a very slight strength, with my patent therapeutic instrument, so as to cause the nerves, or in other words, the human electricity to act by themselves in natural or normal activities, hence it is absolutely safe and never causes the treated regions to become hardened, or make it habitual to require this treatment frequently as in the case of the electric or other treatments.

SPECIAL FEATURES V.

THAT, supposing here is a patient who appeals the stomach troubles but has concealed fever or trouble inside the body bequeathed by the previous sickness of cold, or some other reason, which was considered cured, such concealed sickness is usually overlooked even by experienced doctors. These concealed or overlooked sickness can be cured eventually in course of this treatment for the stomach troubles.

Even after receiving this treatment in such a case as above, it may sometimes happen to cause the concealed ailments come outside in acute form, and the patients would be frightened to think of it as if the ailments have got worse. But, it is not at all the result to worry about like the secondary reaction of the medicines. It is nothing more than the wind or rain before the weather clears up. By continuing this treatment such systems will be wiped away together with other chronic diseases, if any, also the latent diseases concealed, all at the same time.

The thing I am most proud of in this treatment is for the acute cases accompanied by high temperature. If such acute diseases were brought under my treatment quite soon, if possible right after affected, or at least one or two days later, positive cure would be guaranteed in almost all cases without failure, even for such dreadful epidemics as influenza, acute pneumonia, typhoid fever, diphtheria, scarlet fever, cholera, or dysentery.

The peculiarity of this treatment is to cure one or more diseases, which one person is affected with at the same time, with one treatment most easily and instantly.

If people receive this treatment while in good health, they will never get unwell. It is, therefore, the safest and the positive preventative measure against all diseases.

THAT, in usual medical treatment, it is frequently the case that unskilled doctors spend several days in order to ascertain the nature of the pathogenic bacteria of the patients' diseases, whether the fever is due to the chest complaints or to the intestinal troubles, such as typhoid fever, typhlitis, etc., thus missing the proper medication to apply at right time kill the patients, who would have been saved otherwise. In my treatment, no matter whether the fever is due to the chest or other organic troubles, the treatment can be given for these local diseases right at once to remove the fever. Removing the fever the diseases will naturally get relieved and cured.

CHAPTER V

*Practical Examples of the Patients Cured(1) Asthma. Girl (H. Ishida), age 16.

Three years ago, was affected with a very bad cold. Since then, caused the asthma suffering at every change of climate, when violent coughing was usual.

Such a patient was cured cleanly with twenty-eight treatments.

(2) Abdominal Expansion. Y. Takanabe, baby at the breast.

Two days after born. Temperature over 38. Abdominal expansion, crying fearfully.

With only one treatment cured.

(3) A slight attack of apoplexy. K. Yoshiuue, age 51.

Once three years ago, lost senses from apoplexy, since then all the time were receiving medical treatment of almost all kinds, on which account became better so much as could walk with help of a cane, but the hemiplegia on the left side still remained incured. Cannot walk unless by wearing the grass-sandals tied up to the feet joints, otherwise they will slip off unconsciously, and the left hand bent up, and the finger tips numbed, so much as unable to pick up anything.

The above patient, after 30 treatments, was able to wear the wooden clogs instead of the grass for walking, and after 40 could carry about things in the hand, and after 60 abolished cane, and finally after 90 he got so well as felt no inconveniences in all moves.

(4) Abdominal Expansion after delivery.

Mrs. S. Odagaki, age 42.

During first two or three years after affected with the expansion, received several medical treatments, but having no effects left it alone for about six years, during which time bowels did not move unless purgative was taken, the abdomen swollen as if five months gone with child.

With 48 treatments the bowels became to move every other day without taking purgative and the abdominal swell has been cured.

(5) Brain Diseases (feared of).

Child of Dr. Tanaka, age 5.

Some gynæcologist's son had suddenly the intestinal trouble since the night before last, temperature 39.3; if left alone, would cause the brain affection according to the diagnosis of a pædiatrist. Surprised at this diagnosis I was called in, as he knew me some days ago when his wife's ictirus after the delivery was cured by me.

I gave him the first treatment at once, the result was the child got so well as to let him taken up to the mother's breast, whereas he cried for painfulness previously even in changing side in sleep. By the second treatment next morning he has been cured quite well.

(6) Brain disease.

Boy (Y. Yamada), age 10.

This boy has no special disease to point out, but is said to be very forgetful, and the school merit is unadmirable.

Hence he was taken to me with his mother accompanied to see if there was no means to improve.

For three weeks, once every day, I treated him. The result being very good, I was asked to continue the treatment during the school examinations from five days previous. At last he passed the examinations with very good merit.

(7) Burn and Bacteria.

T. Nakajima, age 35.

Three days ago, had a burn at side of the wrist, and when taking hot bath happened to bruise the part. Perhaps owing to the bacteria intruded through the bruised part, it became to show two red lines marked up to the armpit along the lymphatic gland, just as drawn with red ink. On account of the painfulness felt, could not get asleep last evening all through.

With one treatment the red lines disappeared, and after five cured quite well.

(8) Catarrh of the throat.

R. Takahira, age 49.

This patient became hard to utter voices, through the throat catarrh, in consequence of having made public speeches on three different occasions during one night.

With the first treatment he became able to make speeches next evening, and cured completely well after seven times treatments.

(9) Corpulency.

Mrs. N. Takanabe, age 52.

This patient had the inflated abdomen from corpulency since several years, so much as she could not have the obi (sash) tied up well tight around the waist without being afflicted with it; hurried breathing when walks up hill-roads; stiff neck always; could not get on without taking digestive medicines after each meal, and “amma” (massage) every evening to get relieved from the sufferings.

Completely cured with seventy-eight times treatments. It is now about three years since and she is taking no more stomachic or amma.

(10) Colic.

N. Miyashita, age 38.

Suddenly affected with the colic, countenanced pale, accompanied by chill, fever, and cold sweat, agonizing in bed.

I was called in immediately after he was laid in bed, and with my first treatment the pain has been relieved, and after three treatments got up well.

(11) Cholera Infantum.

Girl (A. Takeuchi), age 5.

Till dark she was playing outdoors as usual, and in the night her face became pale, temperature 39.7, and had frequent discharges of the mucus and bloody stools. A doctor in the vicinity diagnosed as cholera infantum.

As taught by the neighbour, who is a clerk of the Matsuzakaya Department Store, I was called in at once.

It was about 9 o'clock that evening when I treated the first. Next morning the temperature got down to the normal, and on the day after next became so well as able to come to my office for further treatments. On the fifth day she got quite well.

(12) Catarrhal cystitis.

Mrs. S. Yoshida, age 28.

In any evening when felt coolly, she wakes up twelve to thirteen times for passing urine before morning breaks up even when went to bed so late as 11 p.m., thus had no time to enjoy a good sleep, or to keep her body warmed up. She had been suffering for three years from such miserable condition.

The patient has been cured perfectly well after 48 treatments.

(13) Carbuncle at the neck.

K. Ohi, age 43.

A few days ago, had a small tumour at the neck, which gave awful pain when it comes in friction with the shirt collar, with the root spread out deep inside, which made him difficult to turn round the neck. He went at once to a doctor and was told that the surgical operation was necessary right soon, as it was the carbuncle of rather bad nature. As he knew my press-stimulation treatment, he left the doctor telling to come again after making all preparations, and at once turned steps to my office for the treatment.

With 8 treatments only, cured clean.

(14) Diarrhcea (Acute Catarrh of the Colon).

Y. Kaneko, age 58.

For two days received medical treatments and injections, but the pain was just as severe as before, and he felt such pain every time bowel moves, which counted sixty times in a day, of bloody stools. Temperature 39.1. Miction became difficult. Very serious.

Such a patient was treated in the afternoon three days since laid up in bed. With the first treatment he began to feel miction, thereby the abdominal swell was removed, and the temperature down to 37.6. Since then, getting better treatment after treatment, the bowel movement decreased to once or twice in a day, without taking any medicines of doctors, and got up quite well after thirteen times treatments.

(15) Diarrhœa (Acute Catarrh of the Colon).

Y. Tusboi, age 33.

The following is the translation of the extract from the Rinkai Shogyo Shimbun in Tokyo dated May 15th, 1926, the president of which was cured with my six times treatments in only two days of the acute catarrh of the colon:—

“At midnight of the 12th inst., I had a diarrhœa gradually increasing in the frequency, and each time feeling violent pains at the abdomen, also at the back and the thigh. The discharge was mucilaginous and bloody stools. Temperature over 39. Painfulness increased so much as unbearable, the feet became cold, and numbness felt at the tip of the fingers. Rolled about on the bed, pressing down the painful abdomen. Under such condition, I had to think about what would be the best way to do.

I thought that, if I should ask a medical doctor to treat I would have to be taken in to an isolation hospital and treated as an infectious patient, thus might make the thing worse. Eventually I became to recollect the Press-Stimulation Treatment of Dr. Fujii, who always claimed to cure all diseases if brought under his care whilst in acute stage, and determined to ask for his treatment as soon as the morning breaks up.

But it takes at least three hours in coming and returning from the "Yoseikaku" to my suburban residence to ask for his treatment. Moreover, it must be after 5 o'clock p.m. to ask him to come down, because from 8 a.m. till 5 p.m. he is occupied for the treatment of the patients at his office. He would come if I asked, but it would give much embarrassment to number of the patients there waiting for his treatment. I was suffering so badly as impossible to bear till the evening.

It was not, however, easy task for me to go to the "Yoseikaku" so far distant at near the street-car stop at Hatago-cho, Kanda. I hesitated very much as I was so weak as I felt a great fatigue even in changing the dress. But, as the condition got worse and worse every minute I have had to determine to go, accompanied by my wife and a student servant for the help in case of need during the travelling to the "Yoseikaku." It was just past noontime we arrived there.

I had only to throw down my body immediately after alighted, being relieved of the anxieties entertained of the probable mishaps that might occur on the way to there, though the fatigue was so great as indescribable.

I was carried in to the bed in the treating room, where I at once received the doctor's kind and careful treatment. After one treatment all the pains were instantly removed and the spirit refreshed very much, and felt the assurance of the recovery to the life, and thus became able for the first time after arrival to speak out to Dr. Fujii all stories. I had never before experienced such a heartfelt gratification, tearful in my eyes.

I wish to inform to the readers of this newspaper that the instrument he uses for the treatment is only a handful large. With such a small instrument he cures all the pains and sicknesses. I slept well that night and got up almost quite well next morning, with no more diarrhœa, complexion restored to the usual, appetite regained, and with no reaction as in the case of medication treatment, or any change in the meal taste as is usual with high temperature, only feeling a slight weariness.

Dr. Fujii told me that the weariness I felt was on one hand the result of my not having taken substantial food but a few quantity of rice soup since the last evening, while on the other hand discharged all in the bowels since yesterday, and that I may be able to take for that evening's dinner a common diet after receiving two more treatments that day. If I could take dinner that evening, he said, I would get so well next day as to be able to attend my office work. He reminded me also to try to take always sufficient food so as to make up the lost energy as early as possible, otherwise I would get weak; weakness always makes the sickness worse; the treatment must be done in a positive way like that always.

He also told me that in the advanced treatment the patients must be treated so as to become able to take food as much and as soon as possible, and for those who cannot sleep well must be treated so as to enjoy a good and sufficient sleep.

It is one of the special features of the Press-Stimulation Treatment that the patients of any disease are never restricted to a food or a drink as long as they want anything. Thus, I was urged to take a drink that evening for congratulation of my having got well, also the same meals as Dr. Fujii took, as the result of which I was completely recovered from the weariness next day.

Do the readers of this newspaper think that there would be any doctor in this world like Dr. Fujii who can cure the bad diarrhœa as mine in one day, removing the high temperature and the pain in such a short space of time, and making able to take drink and meals right soon? Perhaps the well-known Dr. Miura or Dr. Irisawa would be hard to do that. I really felt the greatness of Dr. Fujii's treatment.

Previous to this, I often heard many patients of different diseases were cured by Dr. Fujii without any medicines but with a simple treatment. I did not believe it. Now I have realized and am astonished at its greatness,—the proof of the pudding is in its eating.

I understand that Mr. Chusuke Fujimura, the manager of the Keijo Nipposha, was cured with this wonderful treatment of his stomach trouble of ten years standing, and sent a poem to Dr. Fujii in approbation, meaning :—

“Since Dr. Fujii appeared in this world how silly it would be for diseases to take doctors' medicines.”

At first when I was shown with the above poem, I thought Mr. Fujimura said too much of this treatment, but now I have personally recognized the greatness of the treatment which is fully justified by the above poem.

I became to believe that in near future this treatment will be sure to cause a revolutionary change in the medical circle of the world, because there are at present no treatments in the world which can be compared with this treatment, in the sureness and the quickness of curing effect upon almost all diseases, except those which require surgical operations.

In conclusion, I am sorry to say that I am not a poet like Mr. Fujimura, but wish to add that we are very fortunate and proud of having produced such a great man like Dr. Fujii among our fellow countrymen, especially in this city of Tokyo, who has accomplished that great task of the medical reformation. Y. Tsuboi.

(16) Loose bowels (Diarrhœa). M. Fujino, age 21.

Immediately after affected he received a doctor's treatment, and though after three days the frequency of the loose bowels decreased from 25 to 7-8 times in a day, but the latter condition has been continuing for more than thirty days now, with least prospect of being improved. Moreover, lower abdomen inflated hard inspite of taking no sufficient meals; looked quite exhausted.

This patient has been cured and got up from bed after seven times treatments, decreasing in the frequency of the loose bowels to two times after the first treatment, and to one time after the second. After the fifth treatment he became able to take substantial food, of course abolishing the doctors' medicines entirely during the treatments all through.

(17) Dysentery. W. Iwai, age 32.

Temperature 39.7 for two days since laid up in bed. Counted forty-eight times bloody stools from last evening till this morning. One doctor diagnosed as dysentery, while the other as acute catarrh of the colon. Both of the doctors advised him to enter the hospital according to the progress of that day and the next, prohibiting him from taking any food or beverage even plain water. Pale face and deep agony.

My first treatment was given at 7 o'clock that morning, and immediately after, found the bloody stools have ceased and the temperature was lowered down to the normal. Hence, abolishing the doctors' medicines allowed him to take the rice soup cooked quite thick for three meals that day, and on the next day usual meals, and on the third day, as he got so much better as could walk, advised him to come to my office for further treatments. With further three times treatments he has been perfectly cured.

This patient told me that his doctor, who visited him just after my first treatment without knowing it, was surprised at seeing him so much better, as compared with the previous day when he was in such a bad condition, and was to repeat the word "miraculous" several times, pursuing him to tell what he had done. When he confessed with the truth the doctor was more surprised with no other but the words of admiration, adding "the world has advanced."

(18) Enlarged tonsil.

Child (Y. Sato), age 11.

According to the diagnosis of some medical specialist, this child was to get the surgical operation soon. But, according to the advice of some people who have had the operation, his parents thought it not advisable to receive the operation for the enlarged tonsil of young child, as its influence after growing older is said to be no good for the development etc. In the meantime, hearing there is a treatment requiring no surgical operation, he was brought to me accompanied by his mother for the treatment.

He was cured completely after eighteen times treatments.

(19) Easy labour.

Mrs. M. Uno, age 27.

For more than one year she had been agonizing from peritonitis of chronic form, which was cured by my about six months treatments, and shortly after became pregnant and continued my treatment for insurance of easy labour.

In spite of this being her first time delivery and after such serious disease as above stated, the delivery was very easy. Her husband wrote to me as follows:—

“(Salutation omitted) My wife who had been receiving your kind treatments has delivered a baby at 4 o'clock a.m. on the 16th. inst. after very easy labour, and both the mother and baby are quite well. Kindly ease your mind. I feel gratified for your kind treatment.”

To Dr. Fujii.

M. Uno.

Sept. 18, 1926.

(20) Epilepsy.

Mrs. Y. Tanaka, age 42.

About twenty years ago, when engaged as a school teacher, she was seeing a theatrical performance one evening. Whether or not she was not quite recovered from the weakness after the delivery, shocked a good deal by the performance, which was so sensational one, very much resembling to her own life, and became unconscious for the temporary. Since then, it became like a habit to have the same fit twice in a month, which was the great anguish of her that no one knows of.

Continued my treatment for six months, and one year has elapsed since. The number of the fit has a good deal decreased, so much as only a few times in a year and of very slight ones, instead of twice in a month.

(21) Epilepsy. Girl (H. Hiraoka), age 17.

Since about one year, at the left shoulder and the neck a heavy stiffness was felt; the hands and the legs were cold; a heavy pressure was felt at the head and had cramp in the hands; and frequently become unconscious or sometimes let it drop unconsciously the rice-bowl held in the hand.

By two months' treatments all the above complaints disappeared, and she has been cured perfectly well.

(22) Fistula ani and Asthma. R. Saito, age 47.

In almost all cases of the surgical operation, as this patient told me, it is liable to further operations, very often even for three times. Not only that, if the result of the operation were not good there would be a risk of having other complications to set in thereby to shorten the life, inspite of the sufferings of the operation itself, which is already the painfulness beyond description even in case the result might have been satisfactory. Thus thinking he had been seeking, for about twenty years, after some other treatment than the surgical, enduring the pains which were felt every time when sat in the lavatory, also the troubles of changing several times the loin-cloth during the day, which gets stained soon after changed with new. He happened to know from his friend that the Press-Stimulation treatment would cure his sufferings without knife, just on the day previous to that when he came to me for the treatment.

With 48 times treatment this chronic fistula ani has been cleanly cured. Not only that, he had asthma for twenty years, which has also been cured with 57 times treatment.

(23) Gastralgia.

S. Miyabe, age 41.

One evening suddenly felt the acute gastralgia and has been laid up in bed. Immediately, called me in for the treatment. I treated him only once. He got instantly well. Two hours after, he took usual meal for dinner.

(24) Gall Stone.

K. Yoshimura, age 42.

The disease had been ascertained as the gall stone, and received three injections from a doctor, but got no well since five days laid up in bed, timely pains as before, the liver part being felt to the fingers hard and swollen.

With eight times treatments cured completely.

(25) Gonorrhœa.

Y. Tamura, age 28.

One week since affected, discharging the pus constantly with unbearable pains when passing urine.

With 21 times treatments cured clean.

(26) Hypertrophy.

K. Yoshii, age 58.

Twenty days since laid up in bed, receiving medical treatments but with no desired effect, tired of cooling the part with ice for two weeks.

With fourteen treatments, abolishing ice bag and medicines altogether, cured thoroughly well.

(27) Heart disease.

A. Kiyoda, age 54.

In October, 1926, I was invited by Visc. Saito, Viceroy of Chosen, to treat for the benefit of general health of him and his Madam, and stayed there for about twenty days. On that occasion, allowing the request of general residents, both officials and non-officials, treated quite a number of patients at the Honcho Department Store Building. Among these patients there was one who is one of the influential residents in Keijo City, and was suffering from the heart trouble, so bad as unable to step up to the second storey without feeling the hurried breathing, and for that reason he could not dare to visit the third storey show rooms of the above-mentioned department store building.

He was very glad to tell me that he has been cured so much well as became able to walk up to the third storey show rooms, without any difficulty but with great ease.

(28) Hair scrape.

K. Kawamura, age 28.

Had a scrape on the side of the skin which covers the glans penis since yesterday.

With 4 treatments, completely cured. Considering from this, venereal diseases might be prevented before leading to the bubo, if it is possible to cure the bruise or scrape inflicted on the glans penis by bringing it under my care soon after having detected it. But as I have not experienced in this yet, shall leave the subject for further study with interest.

(29) Influenza.

Mrs. K. Seto, age 28.

Temperature rose up to 39.8 since last three days, having no sign of mitigation with the medical treatment.

After only one treatment, she got better so much as was able to come next day to my office "Yoseikaku" at Tashiro-cho, Kanda, Tokyo, near the Street Electro-Tramcar stop at Hatago-cho, Kanda, from her residence at Omori, suburb, for my treatment. She was completely cured after three times treatments.

The following is the translation of the letter sent to me from the patient shortly after:—

"Spring weather begins to be sighted. I suppose you are getting on quite well and prosperous as usual. Very glad to inform that every one of my family is also quite well.

I have been thinking to visit and express to you my thanks for your kind treatments I received last time for my influenza, but as got well I have been busy in the household works, as is usual with all the females, thus prevented me from doing so.

With your kind treatments I am now thoroughly well. The other day, when I had a temperature of 39.8 for three days, I was worried so much as I knew not what would be the best to do.

In that evening, as your coming was too late I had to call in a doctor from the adjacent hospital for examination.

The doctor told me it was the typhoid fever, recommending to cool down with ice and not to take any food except liquid. I had been frightened at the seriousness of my disease, but my husband was keeping the coolness telling me "wait until Dr. Fujii would come, when all the anxieties would be solved."

The clock struck eight, yet you did not appear, in the meantime I began to feel severe headache and sourness in the throat, the temperature showing 39.8 as before. Hence my husband began to break his coolness a bit, and it was just when he was preparing the ice for cooling my head that you did come.

In the midst of your first treatment for about ten minutes, both headache and sour throat had ceased and I began to feel generally easier. About half an hour after you returned, all my sicknesses had gone and could not be found anywhere in the body. All the people in my family had a cheerful laughter at such a state of things.

The temperature at the time fell to 36.7. I had a sound sleep throughout that night. It was something like a dream, I felt. In the next morning I took ample breakfast as suggested by you, and visited your office by the street car to receive further treatments.

Nobody believed when I told the fact, that sick people of so high a temperature as 39.8 for three days continued had got so well within about ten hours and became able to travel on street car from Omori to Kanda near Uyeno. After received your second treatment in that morning, my sickness was entirely missing.

Previous to this, I received your treatments for my stomach pains of several years standing, which were cured completely well after about two weeks treatments, when I was surprised at the greatness of your treatment. We, both my husband and myself, are still more struck with admiration at the miraculous result of your treatment shown this time, the fact that the sickness accompanied by such a high temperature as 39.8 has been cured cleanly with one or two treatments.

My husband, who received your treatment for the difficult breathing in consequence of the nasal suppuration of many years standing, is now quite well and can breathe well. He is very glad of it.

We will visit you to express our heartfelt gratifications as soon as the weather gets warmer.

In ecstasy of joy, I have written too long. Kindly give my best compliments to all of your office staff and tell them I am now quite well."

(30) Icterus.

When staring fixedly at a thing the eyes become congested and painful, and the stiff neck was almost constant.

With forty-three treatments cured perfectly well. In the meantime, favoured with a child after very easy labour, receiving my timely treatments whilst pregnant. She visited me to say thanks and to show me the baby.

(43) Neuralgia in the brain. W. H. Evans, Jr., age 33.

About 4-5 years ago felt painfulness in the head. No effect was seen after several trials of medical treatment. Now it extended to the neck, shoulders and arms thereby no sound sleep enjoyable feeling very painful when getting up from bed every morning.

With my only 3 times treatments the painfulness has been relieved almost quite well. The following is the letter he wrote to his friend in the Tokyo Daily News :—

Kanda, Tokyo, Feb. 14, 1927.

Mr. Y. Yamamoto,

Tokyo Daily News (Tokyo Nichi-Nichi),

Marunouchi, Tokyo.

My dear Yamamoto san,

A few months ago I heard from Kobayashi san (Mr. Murai) that you were attending the Nichi-Nichi, and to-day I have much pleasure to send you this little epistle to connect once more our old cable which held our friendship of Ryusan days. Let us turn back the past and I feel that it is over ten years since we got separated.

Doctor Fujii is a great friend of mine and as I am suffering from No Shin Ketsu I have come under his able care. I have only been under his treatment for a few times, in fact three times, and to show my heartfelt gratitude that I now find towards him, it gives me pleasure, indeed, to be able to tell you some of the many incidents,

I use the word incidents, because I find no other word at my command just now, which is more suitable. I believe Doctor Fujii a wonder in the way he relieves pain and in such small space of time, of course, there is no doubt that it is all the outcome of his genuine work that he had severely gone through in the past fifteen years or more, as I understand it that has brought him the reward he possesses to-day. Doctor Fujii rather bewildered me at first on account of the simple way he went about—a little disinfected or shall I say medicated cotton in one hand and the other holding a small instrument resembling more like the knob of an ordinary walking stick. This piece of delicate mechanism looked to me that it was made of 18-karat gold and I still do not know—it might be nothing but brass or copper and the core might be made of platinum or it might contain some amount of radium. I can only tell you Yamamoto san that during the four days that I have been here Doctor Fujii has proved to me and his countless patients including Governor Saito of Chosen (and it was over there that I had the good fortune to know Doctor Fujii) that with his instrument there is no alternative that he can do better than what physicians have at their command namely drugs, medicaments, knives, etc.

(Signed) W. H. Evans, Jr.

I wish very much to get an opportunity to see you and your family before I return, so shall be happy if you will let me know your whereabouts care of Dr. Fujii.

(44) Intercostal Neuralgia.

Mrs. S. Taketomi (M. P.), age 47.

This patient suffered from the above disease in complication with bad cold, feeling pain at the chest with every breathing, with feverish temperature. It was four days since laid up in bed.

With one first treatment she was able to leave the bed, and after three treatments got quite well.

(45) Nervous debility. S. Murata, age 32.

Since affected with the nervous weakness two years ago, became more selfish and particular in regard to food choice, while appetite decreased, the bowels constipated, the head always felt heavy, feeling languid and getting very nervous. Passed days very unpleasant.

With 60 treatments became extraordinarily healthy man.

(46) Nephritis (Acute) Mrs. H. Furukawa, age 23.

Four or five days ago had a slight cold but forced to attend the kitchen works as usual, in consequence of which grew feverish, painful in the waist part, dropsy all over and the urine decreased, occasionally feeling nausea and oppression in the chest.

On the first evening when I treated only once she had the urine passed every one hour, and on the next, also with one treatment had the urine every two hours abundantly, thereby the dropsy has been removed.

With 5 subsequent treatments, completely cured.

(47) Orchitis. B. Kimura, age 58.

Two months ago was affected with the orchitis and compelled to lay in bed. Doctor was called in immediately. By cooling the affected part with ice bag, also with several treatments the swell got a good deal reduced, and the pains had not been felt if kept still; the affected stone was still swollen hard giving painfulness every time moves or walks, or if pinches even gently with fingers; so far passed miserable days.

This patient has been cured with only 18 times treatments.

(48) Oculus pain after operation.

Mrs. I. Nakamura, age 25.

She had a cataract in the right eye and have had to extract the eye ball by operation. Shortly after, began to feel some unbearable pain in the left eye. Received already ten days treatment at an ophthalmic hospital but the pain had not been removed.

With 5 treatments, she has been cured.

(49) Acute Pneumonia.

Mrs. C. Okumura, age 54.

This patient was affected with acute pneumonia subsequent upon bad cold. Temperature 39.8 continued for three days after laid up in bed. Appealed unbearable pain at the chest and head every time coughs, and was unable to turn over the body.

The pain has been removed instantly with the one and first treatment, the temperature falling down to 37.4. Discontinued both medicines and my treatment, and got up quite well in 4 days after the first one treatment.

(50) Poisoning.

3 children of Mr. T. Asano, president of Seikei Gakuin Higher Middle School.

Leaving three children at home, eldest 10, next 8 and 6, to the care of the servants, their parents were out. Perhaps poisoned by the fried crab meats supplied by the servants for dinner, all of the three children began to groan for pains; temperatures 40° . At once three doctors were called in, who gave purgatives first and rectal injections next, but discharged no indigestives but only liquid secretions, temperature remaining same.

With my one treatment all of the three children had ample discharge of the retention, thereby the temperatures lowered down. With five treatments all of them have been cured perfectly well.

(51) Infantile Paralysis. Boy (R. Kurino), 5 years old.

First affected with cold, the temperature rising up to 40° , which continued for three days. Getting better he had to rise from bed, when he felt some pain in the left leg consequently began to limp in walking. It is forty days since he began to limp.

This patient has been cured almost like an ordinary healthy boy after 6 months treatment.

(52) Pleuritis. Mrs. R. Shimamura, age 29.

As she felt pain at the side of the chest every time coughs in addition to a feverish condition, consulted a medical doctor and was told it was the pleuritis that she suffers from. No effect of the medicines though thirteen days since received the medical treatment.

With my 8 times treatment, cured quite well.

(53) Peritonitis (chronic). Mrs. S. Kamei, age 32.

Was receiving medical treatment first for pleuritis, but in the meantime complication set in, and at last had to suffer from chronic peritonitis. She feels painful when takes ample meals, by which make the abdominal part harder which even otherwise is swollen stiff on account of the water accumulated, therefore, in order to get relieved from that painfulness used to take meals as a little as possible. Passed days in such miserable condition for already sixty-five days seeing no noticeable effect of the medical treatment, though never neglected to take medicines all through.

The above patient has been cured quite well after 58 times of my treatment.

(54) Parotitis.

T. Murayama, age 34.

Whilst taking hot bath to-day happened to find some small tumor felt with the fingers at below the ear. When pressed, the pain extends to the ear, the eye and the nose, consequently very unpleasant.

With 3 treatments, cured quite well.

(55) Pain after injection.

S. Murakami, age 42.

Received precautionary injection from cholera at the back of the body that morning, but now at 3 p.m. feeling great pain perhaps in consequence of the injection solution not absorbed well in the system or the injection needle hurted the part, feeling very unpleasant.

With one single treatment, the pain has instantly been removed.

(56) Articular Rheumatism (acute)

Mrs. T. Kajiwara, age 23.

Shortly after laid up in bed with a bad cold, the temperature rose up to 39°, and began to feel languish at every article in the body. After two or three days, the temperature lowered to almost normal and the languor was removed, but afterward began to feel some peculiarly dreadful pain at every article when it is moved, therefore has been confined in bed already for twenty days being unable to move even for lavatory.

With my first one treatment she became able to walk about and got quite well after 14.

(57) Articular Rheumatism (chronic)

Mrs. M. Hanaoka, age 65.

Since three years, was suffering from the pain at the wrist so badly as unable to lift up the wrist to wipe off the face or to touch the head hairs for dressing.

With one first treatment, she was able to lift up the wrist to the face and over the head, and after 63 treatments has got quite well.

(58) Scarlet Fever.

Boy (S. Okabe), age 12.

Temperature beyond 40 at one time since two days, and now lowered down to 38.5, but having affliction at the part from throat to bronchial tubes he feels difficulty in breathing.

With ten times treatments cured completely.

(59) Chronic Stomach Trouble and Proctoceles.

C. Okumura, age 57.

This patient, who was suffering for many years from stomach trouble and proctoceles of remote causes, has been cured with this treatment quite well, and wrote to me a letter. As the letter accounts the whole story and as he so desires I will give the whole contents of same :—

June 10th., 1924.

Gentlemen,

I am one of the men who received Dr. Fujii's treatment some time ago when he was not opened to general patients but treating only those who were introduced by his friends or acquaintances. I hear that he has now established his office and opened for general patients, and I feel it the greatest pleasure to write a few lines about his treatment how it cured my chronic stomach trouble and proctoceles of so stubborn a nature also the nervous weakness satisfactorily after his ardent treatment for about six months. I shall be very happy if this letter will serve in any way as for the advertisement, as I am anxious to make people know of this new treatment by which I have proved the facts that even the chronic diseases which were hitherto considered as incurable can be cured perfectly, and that this treatment really worths the merit of a new and great invention in the medical circle of the world.

Let me relate, for reference of the people who are suffering from similar complaints, the cause of my disease and the progress of same during the past years. I was born rather weak and used to suffer from beri-beri (Kakke) every summer time, between the ages of 9 to 19, which was cured by medicines and no more suffered since 19. At the age of 31, about twenty-five years ago, when I was in London engaged in bank business, I was suddenly affected with acute spinal paralysis, the temperature rising up to 39°2. At first I felt the motion and went into the lavatory but did not move. Therefore I came back to the sitting room and took purgative but had no effect. Not only that the miction stopped at the passage, the lower part below the waist having completely paralysed with the both legs invalidated like the doll's. I returned to the room crawling about with the hands, and immediately a doctor of the nerve speciality was called in. Three months after, I was at last improved so much as able to move the toes and can pass the urine without aid of catheter. Thus getting better slowly I returned to Japan with the aid of a cane.

After returning home I tried all the ways of recuperation, as the result of which I became gradually improved so well as able to walk about and attend my office work though not in quite perfect health. The restoration of the nerves which once lost sense of was very slow, consequently I became to suffer from constipation which caused proctoceles. When it became so bad as unbearable, about eighteen years ago, I received surgical operation. But as the constipation was as bad as ever before, the proctocoele again appeared. All the medical treatments, hot mineral spring bathing and several other remedies were tried, but proved helpless only relieving the pains for the temporary and the root of the disease remaining incurable.

The condition got worse with the course of years and finally the stomach and intestines became affected with the chronic, accumulating all the time the gas, giving unbearable pain both at the front and the back part of the stomach region, and vomit in top of the pains.

After vomiting either naturally or forcibly the pain gets relieved for the temporary, but on the other hand appetite decreased gradually, thus caused the nervous weakness. Being anxious about the above conditions my families frequently advised me to receive medical treatment, but as I knew from my past experience none of the medical treatments, so far as I know, was suitable for my disease I refused to do so. But whenever I find new treatments advertised in newspapers and magazines I tried them. Unfortunately I failed to come across any treatment such as to cure my disease from its root.

Whilst in the agony as above, I met with the great earthquake and fire of 1923 which gave me a great shock both bodily and mentally, and the condition of my disease became worse and worse and at last so serious as hardly could walk about. Eventually a friend of mine, Mr. N. Saito, who knew Dr. Fujii, recommended me his treatment as the best and the surest, and introduced me on October 15th, 1923, when I first received his treatment. The method of treatment was so simple as to press with very slight strength with some kind of a therapeutic instrument at the affected parts, the stomach, the intestines, the back and the waist from over the skin, giving no painful or unpleasant feeling whatever but rather pleasant one. After received this treatment the pains almost instantly disappeared, the hardened stomach and intestines became very much softer and their actions revived, thus feeling active spirit in the whole body. As I thought this was the very ideal treatment which I was seeking for many years,

I at once decided to continue the treatment.

It was about six months every day, except prevented by bad weather or inconvenienced on either party, that I continued this treatment. With every number of the treatment the appetite increased, the complexion got brighter, the pains at the stomach cured. Moreover, the proctoceles became so much better as the prolapsed anus could be kept in after the motion, which was impossible before unless warmed in hot water bath for about three hours, even then showing out about one-third in a prolapsed and swollen state. It was only about 12—13 times that I received this treatment for the proctoceles trouble.

However, for about four months from the first treatment received, the accumulation of the gas and the constipation were felt as if apt to come back whenever the treatment was suspended. I thought then that this treatment would be good only for the temporary. With that suspicion I often enquired to Mr. Fujii who always explained to me that my troubles were of several years standing, having cause to the spinal paralysis way back, therefore it cannot be cured easily, and told me to be patient until the heart and all other organs would become working in healthy condition, thus the blood circulation all over the body would become adjusted, when my troubles would have been cured thoroughly well and not come back again. So I continued to receive the treatment relying upon his words. I am now perfectly well and healthy, and engaging in business actively for the restoration of the damages inflicted by the last earthquake. The motion is seen every other day, which was formerly once in two weeks, or once in 4—5 days at the beginning of this treatment. No pains are felt now in the stomach, feeling quite a new man.

It was really the goodness of him that I have been saved from the serious illness. Herewith I wish to summarize a few items that I felt most peculiar in his treatment which I received during so long a space of time.

(1) Complexion became very bright like a different person. My families and friends are surprised to see that I look about eight years younger. This is really a natural rejuvenating treatment.

(2) During and after this treatment, became more resistable against coldness of winter, not affected with chilblain or chap from which I used to suffer in every winter time before.

(3) This treatment cures almost instantly cold or influenza (pneumonia also); not only that it peculiarly prevents from being affected with cold or influenza, and even if affected the temperature never rises, therefore it is the safest preventative from pneumonia and other feverish diseases when they are prevalent.

(4) I had several other complaints such as nose and throat troubles besides the stomach and the intestines. They have been cured unawares during the treatment.

(5) Whatever weariness happened to be felt in the body, it cures instantly giving liveliness and tension through the whole body; and it makes the whole body pleasantly warm after the treatment.

(6) In this treatment there are no restrictions in regard to the meals. Also, it is very convenient that for almost all diseases a constant rest is unnecessary. We can receive the treatment at spare time without taking absolute rest of the daily works unless in serious cases.

(7) With this simple method of treatment from over the surface skin of the body, its effect goes well deep to the affected part inside the body, and one can soon feel the progress of the improvement with the treatment after treatment. Therefore, one can receive this treatment always with the pleasure and prospect that the diseases will be sure to cure. Its effect is really worthy of admiration.

(8) If ever this treatment be taught to general people besides medical professionals, all the people would become good doctors, and nobody would require the unreliable medical doctors. Not only that, as every people can prevent from being affected with any diseases by applying this treatment timely in the health, he may be able to enjoy always good health. How permanent a man can maintain his life by that way would become an interesting subject in near future among our human circle.

I have plenty more to write about this treatment, but as I have already gone pretty long I shall stop my pen so far as above, and will write further on some other occasion. Lastly let me repeat here that this treatment is really a novel invention looking from all points, and I will take the pleasure to recommend it to various people whom I know or come across. I feel it my duty to do so in token of my sincere gratitude with this marvellous treatment.

Yours sincerely, etc.

(60) Stung by poisonous insect.

Mrs. F. Tagawa, age 21.

Whilst in bed last night, whether or not poisoned by bed-bug or other insect, found the part swollen red which makes painfully itchy.

With one single treatment, cured well.

(61) Stiff-neck.

Mrs. R. Yoshioka, age 35.

Felt stiff-neck first in the fall of her 25 years of age. At first the massage was applied to remove the stiffness three times in a month, but afterwards increased to eight or nine times. Being still insufficient, had to try beastly injections once or twice in a month.

With 39 treatments, cured thoroughly well.

T. Shimada, age 25.

Immediately after affected, received medical injections once every day for twenty days, but no effect was realized. Then received 606 injections which adversely increased pain so bad as he could not turn round the body or rise up. With help of other person he could go to lavatory, but was very hard to bend down. Therefore, he tried as much as possible not to go to lavatory, and for that purpose stopped to take any meals, and was laying in bed. It was three days since he stopped to take food.

With my first single treatment, which was given after twenty-five days counting from the day when he was first laid up in bed, he was relieved and became able to raise the body by himself without help. After 3 times treatments he was able to bend down without feeling the pain, and after 15 he has been cured completely well and became able to take part in the active life.

(63) Suppuration.

M. Goto, age 35.

Ten years since suffered from the suppuration in the nose. Several medical treatments gave no good effect to him, feeling recently queer and heavy head and feeling quite unwell. In the perplexity of it, came to Tokyo from Yamagata Prefecture with a view to consult some medical specialist in the city. But upon hearing from the doctor that surgical operation was necessary and it would require two months to stay in the hospital before getting quite well, returned to his hotel at Uyeno rather discouraged. Whilst thinking what to do, his friend in the city visited him at the hotel, to whom he consulted telling that all the doctors, almost as a rule, advise him to undergo the surgical operation, but he dreadfully dislikes the operation. His friend told him that the surgical operation for the suppuration of nose is not at all a new but an old fashioned treatment, and strongly recommended the Press-Stimulation as the best and improved treatment. So he came to me at once.

With 24 treatments, cured completely. It is already two years since he had been cured, and on every occasion of coming up to the city he makes it a pleasure to pay visit at my office "Yoseikaku".

(64) Typhlitis.

S. Kobayashi, age 18.

Two days after laid up in bed, a doctor told him it was the typhlitis, and recommended to cool the parts with ice. Did so for two days but got no better.

With the first treatment he got remarkably better and after eight times treatments cured perfectly. Neither ice nor medicines used.

(65) Typhlitis.

Y. Matsuda, age 32.

Before the daybreak felt unbearable pains at the abdomen, and immediately after the daybreak I was called in.

This patient suffered from same disease last year, but cured with a medical treatment, according to his statement. This is the second time, hence the affected part (blind gut) is felt with fingers hardened a fist large.

With two times treatments he was able to take usual diet, walk freely, and after forty eight treatments the induration disappeared, and recovered the health perfectly well.

The following is the translation of his letter:—

“Though the hotness of the remaining summer is still so great as unbearable, I congratulate you are getting on quite well and engaging as ever for the rescue of human being from sickness. I reached home in my native province safely on the day before yesterday, when I learned that a son of my acquaintance (age 23) had a violent pains at the abdomen on the way to the Japan Alpine expedition at Ko-Shin provinces and was compelled to return home accompanied by his colleague by breaking the expedition. Upon reaching home he received doctor's examination, and was found it was the typhlitis that he suffered from and recommended the surgical operation in the hospital. To my greatest regret he died from some complication set in after the operation.

If my returning home were two days earlier, I could have recommended him to receive your treatment and thus saved the life of this young man full of future. Thinking of this I was very lucky that I have been made so healthy with the favour of your new treatment.

As I told you before, first when I was affected with the typhlitis last year I was taken into some hospital for surgical operation, where was found I had the complications of peritonitis and intestinal obstruction, and was feared as dangerous after the operation was over. Fortunately, however, getting out of the danger by the doctors' several cares retired from the hospital though was not quite well. Since then passed very gloomy days, keeping quietude and soft meals so to observe as rules as suggested by the doctor. In the meantime, from a slight cause have had the disease came back with violent pains. I thought I was almost helpless this time.

By the grace of God, a friend of mine who happened to stay over-night in my house advised me strongly to try your treatment as it is the most advanced in the world.

Treatment after treatment by you, I became better. During under your treatment, I was allowed to take meals as I wanted, and as I became better and better daily have been able to enjoy good sleep all through the treatments.

Thus, such a violent pain and the induration have disappeared like a past dream. Now it is one year since I received your last treatment, and I am so happy and strong that I for daily pleasure play the fencing exercise in company with the lively boys out here, feeling no afflictions.

Such is indeed due to your goodness, while I am deploring very much of the death of my friend's son under such circumstances as above-mentioned. Herewith I wish to tender my sincerest gratitude for your goodness on which account am now able to write you with the information of my healthy condition as above.

August 19, Showa 2nd year.

(66) Tympanitis. T. Matsumura, age 39.

Since four or five days, had a ringing in the ear, and felt a peculiar pain at the shoulder, the neck and the throat.

When pecked the ear with the tip of a match-stick, suddenly caused a violent pain inside and around the ear, feeling as if the head is breaking into halves.

With three treatments, cured perfectly well.

(67) Toothache. Y. Yoshida, age 38.

Had toothache since five years, and is going every day to a dentist for treatment but no effect.

With three treatments, cured.

(68) Tinea cruris. *T. Mitsuchi, age 17,
Son of Minister C. Mitsuchi.*

In this midsummer time, being absorbed in the outdoor sports as he sweated, was affected with the tinea cruris at two places. As it itches so terribly he has had a specialist to suffuse medicine at the affected parts and bandage with a wet pack. Awakened next morning by the terrible itch felt at the part and surprised to find the affection has expanded all over the place.

With my 10 treatments, cured completely.

(69) Uterine spasm. Mrs. R. Furukawa, age 36.

Two or three times in a year she used to have the spasm before or after the menstruation. Every time affected with this trouble she used to have three or four medical injections. This time she received five injections for three days but with no effect.

Six days after laid up in bed received my first treatment, which cured her so much well as she could sleep well that night, therefore despising with the physicians' medicines continued my treatment for six times, and she got quite well and up.

(70) Uteritis.

Mrs. T. Tamura, age 25.

Changed from endometritis into uteritis, so badly swollen as hardly can pass the fingers through the privates, inflated hard at the abdomen, appealing painfulness even in light press with the fingers, and vomiting any food right after having taken it. Recommended by a doctor to undergo surgical operation next day in a hospital.

After two times treatments, as she became able to take usual diet, abolished medicines altogether and continued my treatment.

Inflammation of every part and the swelling have been gradually relieved with the treatment after treatment, thus after twenty eight times she has been completely cured.

(71) Uterine cancer.

Mr. Y. Seita, age 42.

The letter from the patient speaks the whole story, thus :—

“Since more than ten years I have been very weak suffering from endometritis, also from very weak stomach. I used to receive doctors' treatment every time I suffer, but as it was rather tedious to get well, I always had to give up the treatment before getting it through, consequently was led to the chronicity, feeling constant pains at the abdomen and the back. In April last year, when I went up to Tokyo, I visited the Japan Red Cross Hospital for consultation, where as the result of examination of my blood I was told that my trouble was of the cancer of the uterine therefore the surgical operation is necessary.

But, according to the advice of the doctor, I had to be examined once more by way of precaution by the internist, whose opinion was to wait the surgical operation for a while, as my general constitution was too weak for the operation. Instead of the operation, the Roentgen Rays deep treatment was recommended, which I received 4 times, once every five days, but as it made feel neither better nor worse, the doctor again recommended me to a Radium specialist. When I was going to the Radium specialist, a friend of mine told me that the Press-Stimulation Treatment would do me good. Hence I decided to get your treatment. When I first visited you, you guaranteed to cure without making any office consultation, and when I saw the good effect brought in every time treatment my joy was beyond the pen to describe.

From August 5th to September 30th, I received your treatment every day except your fixed holidays, the 1st and the 15th day of every month, and I now feel very much better generally, and am now receiving four or five treatments every month for precaution.

I was previously so weak as very liable to catch cold more frequently than ordinary people, but since received your treatments I have not had even once the prevalent cold or influenza, feeling quite a different spirit. In order to show my heartfelt gratitude I have written this letter to you."

Jan. 25, Showa 2nd year.

(72) Valvular Incontinence.

Mrs. T. Kawakami, age 32.

Suffering from heart trouble since eight years; her complexion was pale, feeling hardness in breathing when works, with hands and legs always cold.

After 68 treatments her countenance became brighter, coldness of hand and legs cured and workings became easy as usual.

(73) Whooping cough.

Baby (H. Kanaoka), age 3.

It was ten days since the baby was affected with the whooping cough, when he was taken to me.

Cured with eight times treatments.

CHAPTER VI

Conclusion

(1) The reason why the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is claimed to be the best treatment in the world, and its comparison with the existing medical treatments.

Taking together the numerous examples given in the previous chapter, though they are only part of the numberless patients I am daily treating, let me question :—

1. Is there in the present medical circle any treatment which can cure so simply and easily, with such a simple instrument, all female troubles without making either office consultation, cleansing or surgical operation, like the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT ?

2. Next, for the sufferings of the children at breast or youngsters, is there any such treatment as the FUJII'S PREES-STIMULATION which can cure those youngsters cheerfully and instantly instead of forcing rectal injections or operations ?

3. Again, is there any treatment anywhere near the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION which can cure the typhlitis without using knives, or such violent diarrhoea discharging bloody stools so many number of times as 40–50 a day, in such short space of time and so simply with such a simple instrument ?

4. Lastly, is there any other such treatment as the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION which cures such acute feverish diseases as pneumonia, bronchitis, etc., with temperature rising even to 40°, with such a simple and short treatment ?

(2) Positive and Passive Preventative Measures.

1. They take, worst of all, the culture bacteria, which strictly speaking cannot be considered the unfilthiest thing in the world, for the injection into human body for curing diseases or for preventative measure from infectious diseases. Such is the passive or negative measure, whereas the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT can prevent from these diseases in the positive way. Not only that, it cures any diseases, when affected, easily and simply with one small instrument, also by applying it occasionally in health, can adjust the blood circulation in order, increase the resisting power of the skin against cold and all weathers, thus can prevent in a positive way from being affected with cold, catarrhal gastritis, or any prevalent infectious diseases especially in summer times. Is there in the present medical circle such simple and effective as well as positive preventative measure as the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION?

2. Comparing so far as above one with the other, can you find in the present medical circle any treatment which can cure all diseases with one instrument so simply and quickly without fear of the secondary reaction, besides the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION? I should say none.

3. Therefore, I claim to the physicians in the world that the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION is the most refined treatment for all diseases, as well as the most improved preventative measure against all diseases.

(3) I venture to submit it for due consideration of the physicians of the world and await their immediate resolution.

1. I would advise to the physicians of the world to come under my gate as soon as possible, should they really desire to work for the human happiness.

2. As soon as the physicians of the world generally master the use of this life-giving instrument, and how and where to apply it according to the diseases, people of the world can enjoy generally the benefit of this refined treatment.

3. Intelligent doctors of the world should at once listen to my above advice. But, if not listen I should, though very reluctant, try to think of such a measure as to make all the people of the world besides the doctors study my treatment and make them good doctors as I thought at the beginning.

4. Let me once more suggest to the doctors of the world to consider and decide on this subject at once.

CHAPTER VII

*Supplementary Note.(1) Soliciting note to the Government Authorities of the World.

As has been fully treated under the foregoing several chapters I would not go any further but mention that the FUJII'S PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT has the following two important features :—

1st, That it cures all diseases surely and quickly as well as safely, and the instrument itself and the use of it are most simple (the instrument is shown in the photo attached).

2nd, That it can prevent people from being affected with any diseases even infectious diseases in a safest and positive manner.

In the above two features there is no other treatment in this world that can compare my PRESS-STIMULATION TREATMENT.

I should solicit, therefore, to the Government Authorities of the world to send out their specialists for the investigation of my treatment, so as to develop and increase the sanitary measures and the happiness of human being, as well as to provide for the shortness of medicines in case of hostilities between countries, temporary suspension of import, natural calamities or great epidemics, all or any of which might accidentally happen in course of time. Not only that, by adopting this instrumental treatment in usual days, they can save the greater portion of that immense expenditures annually paid out in every country, in connection with the medical treatment and medicines, also with the preventative measures of diseases of all kinds.

Reading "Jubilant Voices of Patients"

Chuzaburo Okumura

IN translating the book "To Physicians of the World" into English, I carefully read through the Appendix "Jubilant Voices of Patients" and knew from it that the efficacies of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment have been so great for the cure of various diseases; that, those patients who ever received this treatment are all in one voice praising Dr. Fujii of his marvellous deeds so much as above human, especially when those who were so weak as in constant intimacy with medicines or in serious affections became so strong as to do away with medicines or have made narrow escape of death with this treatment; that, some were in doubt at the beginning and thought it would be not anything but the puffs of common drugs or patent medicines, but in the course of the treatment once or twice they become convinced of its efficacies and turned to be great believers and speak to other people very highly of it; and that, almost all of those voices are from well-known intellectual class of people. Reading the innumerable notes of impressions as such contained in this Appendix, I am very much delighted and can only admire at the great success which have been made so far by one of our fellow country-men. However, I am afraid it would not be nil-case that one who reads this book or hears the stories for the first time, or one who never had vital experience of this treatment, may be led to wrong interpretation or may doubt of its true merits, as the efficacies spoken of in this appendix have been so marvellous as one can hardly believe to be true.

I, therefore, wish to, from my own vital experiences for many years also from my general knowledge, point out the reasons that there should be no wonder at this treatment having shown such marvellous efficacies as contained in this appendix upon various diseases, and with it to enlighten the general public who believe the medicines are omnipotent or heal-all.

Perhaps it would be not only myself alone but everybody who knows that in the modern medical science incessant investigations are being made, yet in the actual art of curing diseases there are many things regrettable, so much as when one suffers from sickness he often would have to deplore that cure or incure depends upon one's fate or life. I wonder why such a groan is not generally taken as a great insult to the modern medical art.

It is because the modern medical doctors do not know of any other proper treatment existing than the medication, associating the treatment always with medicines. Not only they make no deep investigations into any other treatment besides the medication, but look upon it with scorn, and they determine and give up as if it is out of human power, in case their medication cannot give desired effect upon diseases. People also believe that the medicines are omnipotent and cure-all, and think that, even if the medicines of noted doctors do not prove to cure their own sickness, they have to be resigned to it as fate.

I deeply felt same regret when I lost my baby many years ago and a grand-child afterwards. Both were said meningitis in consequence of stomach complaints. Under medical care, there were no ways and means to cure besides medication, and the medicines did no good at all, say nothing for the brain fever, but even for the stomach affection. Such ineffective medicines were given continuously along with no other ways and means but the cooling of the head and the warming of the feet, thus we were to repeat everyday joy and anxiety alternately, by merely watching at the increase and decrease of the frequency of the fits and of the quantity of the milk taken, for the rest having only to pray for help to God and Buddha.

As such were the only ways and means taken, the patients had only to lose more and more, as time advanced, the strength in the functions of the digestive organs until ultimately became absolutely spiritless, so much as even a drop of the milk was not admitted to pass the throat. Thus, the whole body completely exhausted and passed away. We were to resign ourselves to it as fate or life. But an early death of the infants as such could hardly be thought the life. Even as an outsider of medical affairs, I thought if there should not be some other ways and means besides the medication, so as to edge the poor infants' appetite and restore the anagenesis in order, thus the effect of it might reach to the bottom of the brain and could have saved the life. I was greatly indignant even amid deep sorrow.

Again, I lost recently my old mother 82 years of age, then yet retained her vigour in old age, from unexpected hitch in the stomach. She went out one day for recreation and visit to one of our relatives at a suburban district. She was given a hot bath after dinner, and whilst bathing suddenly vomited, and was laid up there under medical doctor's care, but as the medicines proved no effect ever continued to vomit as she was given any food. So she naturally did not care for any food to take, except fruit juice, soup or milk, but even the milk stimulated her stomach to vomit two in three times.

Such condition lasted for about one month, consequently the weakness were only to increase, and though there were no complaints elsewhere in her body, she became at last so thin as if the bone and skin were the whole constituents and died painlessly. In this instance also, the medicines did nothing good for weak stomach. We could resign to it as life as she was old enough, but I must think it the greatest regret either for the integrity of the medical professions or for humanity, that the modern medical treatment cannot do anything with the revival of the weakened functions of the stomach, which is the prime organ for generating the vital energy of human being, not only in the above-given instances but even in ordinary stomach weakness.

So far as we are taught in the medical text book, the existence, development and cure-of-diseases of human body are to be depended upon the instinct or the vital functions in the body, and the medication for the cure-of-diseases is only doing a part of it as an assistance, the remaining greater part being done by the vital functions in the human body. In order to make up or restore the lost or weakened vital functions, we must rely upon the preservation of health. What would be necessary then to keep up the preservation of health?

In the first place, I must give the taking of sufficient food, and in the next, the keeping of spirits peacefully and the taking of fresh air, thus to instinctively restore the anagenesis in order. However much medicines are taken, or change-air, recruiting and all sorts of recuperations are tried, how could we expect the vital energy produced or the life preserved, without taking assimilative food at all? It goes without saying that no diseases could be cured with medicines alone. Further, it may be seen that, however essential the taking of food may be for the preservation of health, it would be useless unless see to the stomach and other organs working in order. Therefore, it must be the vital importance in the medical art that every sick-people should be treated first of everything at the digestive organs, so that to make them resume their instinctive functions in digestion and assimilation, and able to take sufficient meals, same as the engine-boiler which should be filled with water inside, and the water should be boiled by burning coal underneath, otherwise the steam motive power cannot be generated.

In spite of the general principle as above, the very contrary is the case in the modern medical care of health for sick-people. They teach the sick-people first of everything to reduce as much as possible the quantity of food to take, or to restrict to okayu, omoyu, soup, milk or other liquid or soft meals, or the worst of all total abstinence from food, according to the condition of diseases, and then are given some medicines perhaps to assist in the digestion of the above food, and some other medicines adapted to the diseases, and for the rest are required exclusive quietude. Why?

Because, in the modern medical treatment, if they should allow the patients to take sufficient quantity of food, it would be impossible for the medicines to stimulate the stomach and intestines so as to instinctively perform their functions of the digestion and assimilation of the food, which is the essential element of human life. So they inevitably suggest the sick-people not to take sufficiently large quantity of food, or to restrict to liquid stuff, or else to take anything easy of digestion only. It is, therefore, so negative in the way and entirely against natural law of curing diseases. It is just the same as the engine-boiler, of which the heating power had been exhausted, is filled with water, and added with but a little coal as possible, and no attempt is made to inflame the coal, leaving it alone until it would make a fire itself. How can we expect to get the steam motive power generated, or serious sickness cured by that way?

Even supposing that a patient may happen to be made towards some improvement by that way, it is simply due to the coal making a fire by chance, or the life of the patient was not yet exhausted and made a narrow escape of death as luck, but never can be the result of the medicines given by the doctors, because medicines are powerless for the restoration of the weakened functions of the digestive and other organs. Should the patients be out of luck, he would not be saved in any way. Thus, it is quite right for the people to deplore that, cure or incure cannot be relied upon the medicines but solely upon one's fate or life.

Even if such patient as above continues to improve gradually, the cure would be tedious, usually taking long time before getting quite well, because he had already lost assimilation as the result of having reduced the meals from the beginning, which is the measure taken by the modern medical doctors as essential for the preservation of health of the sick-people, thereby general weakness is great and all the functions are slow to revive. Not only it takes long time but is very liable to the complications setting in during the course of recovery.

Further, even if he was fortunate to get quite well in his local diseases by that way, the general weakness still remains as great as ever, and he is required to take rest in order to cure the after-weakness or the prognosis as we always experience. So powerless and inconsistent is the modern medical treatment, no wonder there are so many chronic sufferers in the world.

Now, turning into the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treat- ment, so far as my experience goes on my own chronic diseases of stomach and intestines caused after the spinal paralysis, and from numerous other people's experiences as appear in this Appendix, it is quite plain and praise-worthy that it can give marvellous efficacies upon various diseases, either acute or chronic, without using any medicines. Why? Because in this treatment, we can stimulate the functions and powers of not only the stomach and intestines, which are the prime organ for the digestion and assimilation of food, but all other organs, without giving either such secondary reactions as in the case of medicines, or unnatural stimulation like electricity, or pain or burn like acupuncture or moxibustion, but instinctively and in most positive way. In other words, it is really the treatment exactly conforming to the natural law of curing diseases, having grasped the key of it.

For this reason, in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, patients can be treated by allowing adequate nutritious food to take, and even without giving any medicines, the food will be digested and assimilated naturally. Thus edging appetite treatment after treatment, the spirits will be gained never causing weakness, and the anagenesis of whole body will become in order. High temperature, if any, will be lowered down. Thus, the cure will be noticeable in course of every treatment. Therefore, the cure will be sure and positive, and never be prolonged. That is why this treatment gives wonderful effect upon almost all diseases so much as one can hardly believe it to be true, as may be seen in almost every note of impressions contributed by the patients as appear in this Appendix, and there should be no wonder about it.

It is one of the special features of this treatment that the cure of the disease and the revival of the spirit take place at same time, and there will be no after-weakness or prognosis as in the case of the medical treatment. Patients seldom lay up in sick-bed for a long time in agony except in some particular cases. It is almost usual that the patients become able to convey themselves down to the doctor's to continue the treatment after a few times in sick-bed. If they are engaged in business they may receive the treatment along the business without taking rest of it. There would be no necessity of change-air for health, or going to either winter or summer resorts in order to avoid the winter cold or summer heat, as may be seen in some of the notes of impressions in this Appendix. Further, as it makes the anagenesis of whole body in order and prosperous, it would be a positive measure for resisting against bacteria and infectious diseases. Enumerating so far the merits of this treatment, we may be able to understand that the medicines are quite unnecessary, and that none of the existing treatments can compare with this.

Therefore, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment may be said to have opened up that secret key of the door, which was in the modern medical science considered out of human power to open. In other words, it has succeeded in the discovery of the way of restoring the slackened powers and functions of the life-generating organs which the medicines could not do anything with. Again, it is the very natural remedy, in every way conforming to nature. Compared with the modern medical and all other existing treatments, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is like God-work. I can not find, up to the present, any treatment in the world which is so ideal in the way and acquired the vital point of curing art of diseases, and I wish to recommend this treatment to the whole world as such. I have no doubt that all who have ever experienced this treatment would have the same impression.

In regard to the principle between the sensory and the motor nerves as laid down by Dr. Fujii in this book, I believe it correct, but as to the scientific reason why in such an easy way and with such a simple instrument the cure is effected through the skin to deep inside the body, I regret I am out of power to discuss about, being ignorant of medical science. But in the actual effect, Dr. Fujii has succeeded to get innumerable evidences, not only my own but of various other persons, therefore I must believe there is a great truth underlying, which no one yet finds out. For the discovery of this deep scientific reason, I think it must be left for the investigations of the world's scientific men. Anyhow, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment must be the first and last invention, in its actual efficacies being most natural, quick and sure, and in the simplicity of the way of treatment. I wish to applause it repeatedly here and commend it to sick-people throughout the world.

Let me hope to the medical professions of the world to know of this treatment through my insufficient translation of this book; throwing aside the business prejudices, and with broad mind and in all blank stupidity, try this treatment on their patients of weak stomach and intestines and other diseases, and investigate toward discovery of the said one great scientific truth underlying, then further to open up new aspect of the medical science based upon the said new great truth, and co-operate with us for the promotion of human happiness.

“Do away with unreliable medicines, and learn the art how to cure diseases, by and after reading this book.”Garyu.

Review on the book "To Physicians of the World, by Momotaro Fujii"

by

Mr. Dennosuke Yamakawa (age 50),

President and Chief Editor of the Tengyo Mimpo.

The following is the translation of the article appeared in the daily newspaper "Tengyo Mimpo" issued on Sept. 13th, 1928, written by the above-named gentleman and now sent to me for insertion in this book more or less abbreviated:—

SINCE last spring, I have been favoured with several books from various friends, of which I had many things expected to write about, but to my great regret have been prevented from doing so on account of illness. Thus more than ten copies have been left untouched. Of these ten I shall now dictate my impressions on the book entitled "To Physicians of the World" sent to me by the author Mr. Momotaro Fujii, as I am now under his treatment for my affection with Beri-beri.

"To Physicians of the World, by Momotaro Fujii"—

This book was published in April last and sent to me a copy of it.

I believe the readers of this newspaper would recollect the name of Mr. M. Fujii as the author of the book entitled "From Death to Life" published some years ago. He is also an expert of Acupuncture and Moxibustion. However efficacious these treatments may be, the puncturing a needle through the skin and flesh or the burning a moxa on the skin is no more than a primitive in its way of treatment.

So he thought it a vocation that, we the Japanese as a nation of the oldest country of advanced culture in the Orient must devise some other way than the puncturing or burning the skin, so as to effect still better result. Thus thinking, Mr. Fujii had been investigating for more than fifteen years.

Present invention is said to have been completed after repeating "make and destroy" for several times. The instrument completed is named the "Fujii's Press-Stimulation Therapeutic Instrument" made of some metal. Patent has been granted in Japan, also in England, Germany and France.*

With this single instrument Mr. Fujii started at once a laboratory of physio-therapeutics at Kanda, and during five years treated quite a number of the patients of various diseases and of different social classes. This book is the crystal of the experiments.

There are in Japan various therapeutic instruments which treat patients without using medicines. The electric or magnetic instruments are more or less similar to those of foreign made or of modification. There is also an instrument of the moxibustion which does not directly burn the skin, but in hotness it is all the same as the usual moxibustion.

Mr. Fujii's therapeutic instrument is not the modification of any kind of foreign articles. The skin is not burnt or hurt in any way, or no pain whatever is felt by the patients.

* Just after type-setted, received a letter from U.S. A. Patent Office Board of Appeal under date of April 19th, 1929, giving decision patent allowable.

It is entirely of his original invention.

According to his opinion, all human diseases result from slackness of nerves, which comes out in the symptom of painfulness, itchness, or languidness, etc. Even where the sick-people does not feel any one of these symptoms significantly, the slackness of nerves exists in more or less degree, otherwise there can be no disease.

The human body is protected and governed largely by the sensory nerves, which are chiefly scattered over adjacent under the skin and connect with the nerve-centre, therefore if one's sensory nerves are stimulated whole nervous systems will naturally be stimulated through the nerve center. If the nerves should be properly strained there would be no diseases, or even bacteria of bad nature would not afflict the human body. That is the reason why Mr. Fujii declares "all diseases are due to one single source."

In the treatment with medicines, it is chiefly to cure diseases by applying medicines inside the human body, so as to let them act upon the system of the motor nerves. Such a treatment often gives injuries on account of the secondary reactions of the medicines, therefore, is no good. If we could find some other way without medicines it would be ever so much better.

In some sense, the sensory nerves are the ruler and the motor nerves the rulee. The attempt to cure with medicines first from inside the body on motor nerves and then to let it act upon all other nerves is just reverse and unnatural. The proper and natural way is to treat upon the sensory nerves adjacent under the skin first, and thereby let it influence upon the motor nerves inside, through the brain or nerve center.

The “Fujii’s Press-Stimulation Treatment” is just in accordance with this natural principle, hence the sure and radical cure for all diseases can be possible. So he claims loudly that all the physicians of the world who are practising adverse way of treatment with medicines should come under his gate.

The above his argument is very simple and clear, but so much so none of the modern doctors would accept it easily. I myself cannot decide which is right.

However, so far as my own experience goes, I can say that all diseases are resulted from the slackness of the nerves.

Dr. Pettenkofer proved that even cholera bacilli would not affect anyone if he is constituted healthy, by taking himself the cholera bacilli which was cultured by D. Koch. From this fact we can see at least that the well strained nerves can prevent one from being affected with diseases in certain cases.

Though Mr. Fujii’s new treatment may not meet with general recognition among the medical doctors for the present, but in some future when many examples of perfect cure should have been enumerated it would certainly become recognized. The reasons why would be easy to establish anytime afterwards.

I myself is now under his treatment for the affection of the beri-beri liable to heart failure. Whatever reasons there may be, I find it practically possesses a prominent efficacy for abnormalities of digestive organs, which I frequently experienced during the treatment, but for the affection of the beri-beri, though I am feeling a pretty good effect but not cured quite well yet, besides I am taking medicines under modern medical doctors, therefore, I regret I am unable to give here a definite conclusion.

However, I can state here that I know many instances where several of my friends were cured for many different sicknesses relying solely upon this treatment.

Anyhow, I wish to mention my whole-hearted delight for this sort of original and new invention having been made in Japan.

In conclusion, let me hope that this original therapeutic instrument and the new method of the treatment will prove more and more good effect upon various diseases, and develop in the whole world. With sincerest wishes for success, (Signed) Dennosuke Yamakawa.

Dr. Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is beyond theories

by

Mr. Sai Taketomi (age 51),

Member of Parliament and Attorney at Law.

IT was early summer time of the year just previous to the last Great Earthquakes and Fire which rased the eastern provinces, Tokyo and surroundings, that I became first acquainted with Mr. Fujii through introduction of a friend of mine in profession, when Mr. Fujii were not giving his treatment as yet but to the persons who were specially introduced for. According to the friend of mine, his treatment was something new, and would be good to the affection of digestive organs, from which I was greatly suffering at the time, so I went and received the treatment which was the Press-Stimulation.

With about three weeks treatments, the pain of the stomach was removed and the loose bowels cured, so well as I could take and enjoy any kind of food. In next year just after the great earthquakes, my wife was affected with intercostal neuralgia very badly, which was cured with this treatment of 4 or 5 times. My student-servant who was affected with icterus, with the temperature 39° or more, the eye-balls and the skin quite yellow, was also cured cleanly, with only 12-13 times treatments, if I remember right, and now several years since he is quite well.

Judging from my experience so far as above, I thought the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, which can cure any diseases in such a simple manner, would be sure to win the recognition among intellectual class of people widely in some days forward.

Just as I thought, it has now been known among the intellectual class of people, and I see every time passing before his door there are some private motor-cars stopping.

In the modern medical treatment, which is good and minute in the theory but poor and deficient in the practical efficacy, it would perhaps be a matter of sheer impossibility to effect cure of all diseases with one single medicine giving no secondary reactions as in the case of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation treatment, which cures almost all diseases with one single instrument and with absolute safety. It is really a miracle of modern age, isn't it?

Mr. Fujii declares "all diseases are due to one single source." Further he says that, apart from any scientific reasons, he can explain well in a popular way the reason of all diseases being due to one single source, by the fact that the cures are effected in his treatment always with one single instrument for all diseases equally, whereas, if all diseases should be due to different sources there would require 100 different instruments for 100 different diseases, or 10,000 different instruments for 10,000 different diseases to treat with. The reason is so plain as that, requiring no stiff scientific explanations. I quite agree to it.

I understand Mr. Fujii is looking forward by some time next spring to open the lectures for general public, in order to make all the people of the world the self-doctors taught in this new treatment.

If this view should have been carried out, it would cause a revolution in the medical circle, and so much the happiness of human being. I am one of the deep admirers of Mr. Fujii who is always endeavouring for the sake of humanity with such a grand far-reaching aspiration.

My true impressions

by

Mr. Utayemon Nakamura (age 64),

A disease, whatever it may be, is a thing very trying, especially so for a man like myself, who stands on theatrical stage by profession and lacks the free movement of the limbs. It is giving me greatest agony both bodily and mentally.

For thirty years I have been suffering from painfulness and numbness of the limbs thereby feeling difficult in moving about. Up to this day, I received almost all treatments of so-called modern of many famous doctors, some of whom diagnosed as lead-poisoning and some spinal disease, but no retial of the disease had been noticed. Consequently, I have been unable to devote myself fully for the theatrical profession. Almost all other remedies which were thought good had been tried, but none of them were found satisfactory. It discouraged me beyond anything.

In April last, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment was recommended to me by Mr. Kojiro Yoshimura, the leading and famous vocalist of "Nagauta" songs, who told me its efficacy for all diseases is very significant basing on the principle of "All diseases are due to one single source", and as he spoke so highly and ardently I inclined to try it.

The treatment was quite simple, giving no pain or hurt but making me feel rather pleasantly warm. After received the treatment, blood circulation became very prosperous through whole body feeling quite refreshed. Though I know that the disease like mine, which were considered almost incurable for about thirty years under medical care, cannot be expected to get cured in a day or night, but I noticed evidently that I am improving steadily since received this treatment.

For the present I am so glad that I have found out what I had not been able to do so for many years, and I am now wishing to continue the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment as long as necessary.

In the play of "Hoshii-gura" presented by me on the stage of the "Kabukiza Theater" in June last, many of my patrons seeing my performance told me that the movement of my limbs was looked very much better than usual. It is really the gift of this treatment, which I always receive every day before going to the stage. My son Fukusuke who has no particular disease, yet is also very glad to say that he does not feel fatigue in the performance after received this treatment. My wife, who was suffering from stomach trouble, is also very glad as she became able to do away entirely with medicines, and can enjoy sweets which she is very much fond of, besides she can go on without wearing tabi (foot socks), whereas she could not do so even in summer time without feeling coldness of feet. The loose bowels, which was usual before, is now cured to the ordinary.

Considering from the facts that my disease which was considered incurable is now improving day after day as above-mentioned, and that it did good so much for the rest of my family, there is no doubt that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is the most advanced one above all others in the present age. All the friends of mine and acquaintances to whom I recommended this treatment are equally glad, and thanking me as if I cured them.

From this time forward I shall recommend this treatment largely to all whom I shall come across, to further the happiness of the human races.

The above is my impression of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

My joy of forgetting the fear of diseases

by

Mr. Baiko Onoye (age 54),

*One of the leading actors of the classical drama of the
of the Tokyo Actors Association.*

IN last January, when I was performing in the play of "Ibaraki" on the stage of the Imperial Theater I had a swoon suddenly. Since then, I was thought as doubtful whether I would be restored to the health so well as able to appear on the stage once more, and it aroused an overflowing sympathy among patrons and play-goers. I myself had least confidence of recovery, and being innocent of medical things had only to rely upon medical doctors. Thanks to heaven, however, my soul was still kept with the body, and I was praying for the further help of God and Buddha, so as not to have the fit again, and to be able to continue to live as long as possible, with any aid of medical treatment or by any means of recuperation, however long it may be necessary to take.

Fortunately, I have not had the fit any more, so far giving me a great ease. However, feeling a great disharmony in my general constitution, when I would be able to stand again on the theatrical stage was entirely out of confidence.

Eventually, Mr. Kojiro Yoshimura, who is one of the leading vocalists of the "Nagauta" songs, told me that the "Fuji's Press-Stimulation Treatment" established at Kanda is a marvellous and surpassing treatment for any kind of diseases, and that it is a most scientific one. He recommended it to me for trial very earnestly, as he tried already for his own sufferings and found good, and many of his acquaintances who received that treatment approve it as marvellous. So, I decided to call in Dr. Fujii, the inventor of that treatment, and received his treatment at my residence.

No one would be able to give assertion of any kind unless possessed with self-confidence. Dr. Fujii pointed out just exactly where the cause of the disease lies in my body as if he sees through, and once his therapeutic instrument touches it hits the target as he pointed out at first. It was really so wonderful.

Thus, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment made way for the restoration of my health, so much as became able to resume the stage life with ever so much or even more vivacity. My joy was beyond description.

The condition of my constitution at present is remarkably good or far better than before affected with the sickness, becoming brighter in complexion and more appetitive. Through whole body especially at the abdominal part I feel very much strength, having developed forward instead of flattened to the back-bones. Weight has increased by 600 momme (about 5 lbs). Whilst under the treatment I gave up all medicines and stuck to the above treatment only. Not only myself but my wife also has been cured of her chronic diseases of the stomach and intestines, also the female weakness to a perfect health. We are all feeling grateful.

Afterwards I happened to know that there were many persons surrounding me who received this treatment, and all of them confirm the truth of my statement as above with one voice. They say they have now forgotten the fear of diseases by relying upon the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, and I quite agree with them. There would be nothing happier and of mightier strength in the human life than the fearlessness of diseases. I feel very thankful that I have now become able to devote myself again solely for the theatrical performance, free of the fear of diseases, by trusting in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

A Gospel to Vocalist

by

Mr. Kojiro Yoshimura (Age 54),

Noted Vocalist of "Nagauta" Songs.

FOR anyone like myself engaged as vocalist, the throat is the life. Accordingly we are always particular in caring about the throat more than ordinary people. Any slight causes that may affect the voice are at once tried to avoid or cure by all means. Perhaps this is the same with every professional vocalist. Usual way of curing throat affections is to cauterize it, but it is unnatural and cannot be considered as perfect. Everyone, therefore, is looking forward to some other improved way to come out.

It was by kindness of one of my disciples, Mr. Kotaro Yoshimura, that I first acquainted with Dr. Fujii and became one of the believers of his treatment as the best of all for the throat affections. I am always thanking to Mr. Kotaro Yoshimura, who received this treatment a long time ago, and seeing its marvellous efficacy for himself recommended it to me. At first I was in some doubt, but after a while felt its significant efficacy and soon became to believe it, so much as it is not the kind to be spoken of in the same breath with any other treatments, surpassing above all in every respect. For instance, after received this treatment I find always endurable for long singing without feeling any fatigue, the condition of the vocal cord becoming excellent, the tune free and easy, high and low as wanted, etc. This apparently shows the throat has restored its healthy action. Whatever expert-player one may be, he would not be able to play correctly if piano is out of tune, or violin with wrong strings. With this in view I paid serious attention on this treatment, and after quite a number of experiences I can now recommend it to all vocalists as the best remedy for sore-throat. Anyone who would wish to get a good voice should rely upon this treatment.

The Japan Music Academy is shortly to add a special class of Japanese vocal musics and I am going to take charge of the "Nagauta" class as professor. As soon as I get the post I shall, at the beginning of the lectures, speak to the students on the subject of "the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment and the Vocal Cord." So far as I know, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is not only good for throat affections, but is equally good for all other diseases. Actually speaking, the chronic stomach and intestinal diseases of myself and my wife have been cured with this treatment. I can give many other examples, but I will now confine it here to give my impressions only from vocalist's point of view, as gospel to vocalists.

The rest shall be left for the investigation of the medical specialists.

The valuable treatment which we can recommend to anybody very strongly and without regret

by

Mr. Kotaro Yoshimura (age 44),
Vocal Musician of the Nagauta Songs.

WHEN I was young, I was expecting to become a naval officer, and received the entrance examinations of the Naval College soon after having finished the course of study in the middle school. Fortunately I had passed the examinations both in scientific faculties and in health qualifications, but to my greatest disappointment failed to be admitted into the College owing to the deficiency in the stature. Such circumstance led me to give up in a great dissipation, as the result of which I was to suffer from chronic nephritis, looking so weakly and pale as if a consumptive.

Since then, I have not had even a single day to pass without medicines. In the fall of 40th year of my age, I suffered from pleuritis and entered a hospital for the cure, where I was strictly restricted to soft meals. After 3 months stay in the hospital I left it, but as to the care of meals I had even then to follow the instructions as directed by the medical doctor. I went out of city for about one month for change-air, and when I returned I was still with the pale looking face, constantly feeling headache and stiff-neck, and my face was felt as if swollen, feeling out of sorts. When cast on the glass I was disgusted with my own poorly looking self. As a drawing man will catch at a straw, I tried almost all kinds of treatment said good, such as acupuncture, moxibustion, mesmerizing by will power, oxihealer, electricity, etc. etc., but none of them proved good to me. Eventually, the mistress of the firm Yoshida Shoten, Ikenohata, City, told me she has been able to do away with the medicines which she had been taking almost continuously for over 30 years for chronic dyspepsia, and is now feeling like a heavy burden taken off the shoulders, and that was with the Press-Stimulation Treatment of Dr. Fujii.

It was 3 years ago that I received said treatment for the first time, and continued about thirty-five times in all, as the result of which all of my complaints such as the constant headache, stiff-neck, and swollen face, have been removed clean, feeling quite lively and restoring complexion remarkably good, as if made a new man.

Since then, I have been entirely out of relation with the medicines for about 3 years. Every time when anyone of my family became ill, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment was relied upon. During these 3 years, stomach spasm of my mother, chronic dyspepsia of my wife, typhlitis of my eldest son, and peritonitis of my second daughter have been cured solely with the said treatment. We are all feeling grateful.

Previous to my knowing Dr. Fujii's treatment, I lost my eldest daughter from peritonitis after several months laying in sick-bed, keeping absolute quietude and taking medicines, under noted medical doctors, but without avail. Comparing with this, it was very fortunate for my next daughter who was affected in the fall of last year with the peritonitis none the less serious, but has been cured perfectly well in only two months under Dr. Fujii, without laying in sick-bed even a day, conveying herself down to his office for the treatment.

Though it is of no avail to complain now, but it is a parent's heart that, every time I see the face of my second daughter in good health, I could not help thinking that, if I had known Dr. Fujii since long previous, I could have saved the life of my eldest daughter with the said treatment. For piety's sake I wish, and feel it my duty, to acquaint all the sick-people with this treatment as soon as possible. Thus every one of my family is speaking very highly of the said treatment to every people coming across, and we are very glad at seeing those people, who have received this treatment, are gratifying with it. At my first interview with Dr. Fujii, I was told by him that he can cure chronicities as well, but his principal aim is to cure all acute diseases before getting into chronicities, and further to make people absolutely free from being affected with acute diseases, by occasionally applying the said treatment whilst in good health. During past 3 years, we received this treatment severally, first for chronic and acute diseases, and then occasionally as the measures for preventing influenza in winter and other prevalent diseases in summer time.

On that account we have been quite free from uneasiness of prevalent diseases, either in winter or summer time, enjoying always good health and happiness. In order to make the public equally enjoy the same happiness, we have not forgotten to recommend the said treatment very strongly, seizing every opportunity of meeting with the people talking of illness.

Lastly, I wish particularly to mention that, in last memorable grand concert held at the Japan Musical Academy on the 12th inst, in the presence of H. I. M. the Empress, I have been able to effect the great performance satisfactorily. In fact, as I felt previous to the above concert somehow affected at my throat and anxious, I visited Dr. Fujii in company with my master, Mr. Kojiro Yoshimura, on the morning of that day before attending the concert, and received the treatment together.

I shall conclude this writing by tendering again my heartfelt thanks to Dr. Fujii.

Having received the “Dr. Fujii’s Press-Stimulation Treatment”

by

Mr. Kamajiro Murase (age 58),

Formerly a Councillor of the Imperial Government Railways, Chosen, now a director of The Nagauta Association.

I have already passed man’s span of life fifty and now entered upon declining years. I had been in the habit of taking a tonic after every meal for over ten years, having the weakness of digestive organs since long ago, occasionally suffered from the spasm. Recently I became corpulent and adipous especially at the abdominal part, thereby the heart was oppressed, and the beating of the heart and shortness of breathing, stiff-neck, headache, dizziness, or pain at the waist being the frequent troubles I felt. In every such case, medical doctors were consulted, and I was told more than once by them to be careful of arterilos-clerosis or rise of blood-pressure.

I happened to receive an advice from a friend of mine to try the Fujii’s Press-Stimulation Treatment, and was explained that it is a singular treatment using no medicines, invented on the principle of “all diseases are due to one single source”, and that its efficacy is a wonder. But I did not feel inclined to change at random my long belief in the medical treatment.

Some time after, I learned from one of the prominent doctors of medicine, that the medication treatment cannot be considered in any way an ideal cure on account of the secondary reaction of the medicines, and that such a way as to cure diseases of any organ by restoring the blood circulation in order, by giving some treatment on outside body with say acupuncture, moxibustion, electricity, or massage, is rather safe and effective; recently scientific investigations are being made in our medical circle on such ways as above-stated, and in U.S.A non-medication or physio-remedies have already become popular, and not merely that the herbs, which were once used by our oriental doctors, are now being utilized there in place of the modern chemicals. Thereupon, I partly became inclined to try the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment. That was the route or motive that I began to change my belief in the medicines to that in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

To tell the truth, however, at the beginning when I received this treatment I could not help doubting if the descriptions given in the book "To Physicians of the World" would not be the kind of the puffs of patent medicines, because the treatment was so simple and did give me in no way an impression to get the disease cured. But I found afterwards I was wrong. About ten days after, to my great astonishment, the headache and the stiff-neck, from which I had been almost constantly suffering, have been neglected unawares, besides became very much appetitive, the digestion excellent, the bowels regular, the pain at the back unfelt, and the spirit revived quite cheerful, moreover the corpulent abdomen became abated so much as after three weeks my pants were to be repaired to suit the girth.

Further, I had a bad cold with sore throat, which has been cured with only one treatment, without keeping me in sick-bed lingering for two or three days as was usual before in such case. Considering from this fact alone, it may be certain that for all feverish diseases of acute nature can also get the benefit of this treatment.

Some patient, who had been suffering from chronic rheumatism for many years and could walk only on crutches, became able to walk without the aid of crutches. Some one who was suffering from acute diarrhœa has been cured with only two or three treatments. Some vocalist whom I know is very glad having been cured of his vocal cord trouble, so glad as he thinks it a miracle. I know there are many other long sufferers of various diseases, who have been cured in short interval and are largely announcing the wonder of this treatment.

From my own and many other peoples' experiences as above, I find it now that there is no space to insert a doubt between as to the marvellous efficacies of this Press-Stimulation Treatment upon all diseases. I sincerely wish to recommend it to all the sufferers of sickness, and hope the medical circles of the world will also adopt this treatment for the sake of human happiness.

Of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Mr. Heikichi Hibiya (age 37),

President of the Hibiya Bank.

AS a matter of principle, my view of human life is fatalism, consequently I cannot place absolute confidence on any medical treatment whatever it may be. Whenever I receive medical treatment, I always entertain the view that the cure is after all depended upon the power of nature in the human body, rather than the power of doctors, whose part being merely to help the cure however it may look like doing a good many things.

The modern medical science is a science deduced from the facts or results of investigations upon number of diseases through many ages. As an outsider of the medical science I can only be inspired towards those facts, but from my own experiences as well as others, I regret to say that the modern medical treatment is still far from perfection.

How about the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, then? As for its principle Dr. Fujii establishes the following reason as fundamental, thus:—"In order to stimulate the motor nerves so as to keep up their normal functions, the sensory nerves must be stimulated first." I regret I am short of medical knowledge to give a correct judgement of it. However, I can see that there is a marked difference between the two treatments, that is, in the modern medical treatment one part of the nervous actions is required to keep rest in order to give a sufficient move to the other part, whereas in Dr. Fujii's treatment all parts of the nervous actions are required to keep up their normality relatively and simultaneously, by being stimulated in the sensory nerves adjacent under the skin,—one is the negative and the other the positive way of treatment.

It would be useless for me to speak further about the theory of these two different ways of treatment, as I have no fundamental knowledge of the medical science. But as I felt very much interested in the principle of Dr. Fujii's treatment that "all diseases must be cured in natural way," and that "Dr. Fujii's treatment does it," I have tried and found the result was very good just as he claims.

I had been suffering from chronic intestinal trouble. Whenever at change of climate or from other causes, the S-shaped part gets swollen thereby causing loose bowels and exceeding languidness. In such case, it took in the medical treatment a week or ten days at least before getting well, while in the Fujii's Treatment only one time treatment was sufficient to cure, refreshing the spirit and gaining appetite marvellously. I myself have had no acute diseases, therefore had no chance to try this treatment for same. But so far as judged from the facts collected from several of my friends who have experienced, I can tell that much better efficacy it has proved for acute diseases.

Thereupon, I have recommended this treatment among all my relations and friends suffered from various diseases, and the reports from those people were all in one voice "hit the target." I sincerely hope that all the medical doctors of modern science, rather than non-professionals, will investigate this new treatment so as to make it recognized generally among the doctors and the public. So much so it would be for the happiness of the sufferers of diseases in general.

What would the modern physicians look upon this fact?

by

Mr. Risaburo Yenami (age 46),

Managing Director of Messrs. Hibiya & Co., Ltd.

ON April 18th last, my eldest son aged 18 returned home from journey, when I noticed his face was swollen dropsically. At once a medical doctor was called in, who diagnosed as nephritis, and advised him to keep absolute rest and prohibited him from taking any food except a plenty of fresh milk and a small quantity of bread.

Having no special knowledge of the medical thing, I thought it best to trust in the doctor, and tried to make the patient strictly obey the doctor's instructions. At first, the doctor told us the patient would get quite well in three weeks, but at the end of two weeks he said it would require one month more. Thus, after strictly following the doctor's directions for some days, I found the dropsy of the whole body remained just as bad as ever, though somewhat reduced in the face. Not only that, by the strict restriction to the liquid food the patient became remarkably exhausted.

In such state of affairs as above I was awoken to look out seriously.

I concluded to think that, so long as the modern medical treatment is of no absolute perfection, the patient must not be trusted solely with the care of medical doctor, and it would be rather risky to do so. Thus thinking, in the evening of May 2nd last, I asked Dr. Fujii to come and give his treatment on my son, at my house at Kawada-machi, Ushigome-ku. Dr. Fujii cured some time ago my bad cold and intestinal catarrh. Dr. Fujii told me that, the patient being very much exhausted must be given from next morning the Okayu (rice cooked soft with more water) in the way of Japanese-like, instead of the milk and bread, and after two or three days the usual meals of whatever kind the patient would like to take, and further that, in the modern medical treatment for nephritis the restriction to food or a plenty of fresh milk and a few bread is generally considered as the proper way to cure the disease, but in Dr. Fujii's treatment there is no necessity of such restriction; if the patient should be left as it is without giving substantial food, the exhaustion would be only to increase, and there would be no reasons to get the disease cured; in order to recover from the weakness there should be no other way than to allow the patients to take as much sufficient food as he would.

Fortunately Dr. Fujii's treatment is such as to improve the digestive organs in most natural way thus to effect the assimilation beautifully, therefore, we may rely upon him in giving food to the patient. That was the way he instructed us strongly. Moreover, he said, as the patient is understood to be the student of Medical College of the Keio University, it is very good opportunity for the patient's own study, to make a comparative investigation between the modern medical treatment and his, making analytical examination of the urine as accurate as possible.

Believing in the words of Dr. Fujii, who always possesses strong confidence in his own treatment, I stopped from next morning giving the patient any more milk and bread also medicines, and in place of these the rice cooked soft with more water was served, and on the third day ordinary meals, which gave no hindrances to the patient at all. Not only that the dropsy of the whole body was gradually reduced and the liveliness recovered, and after the seventh treatment the patient got so well as he went on the tram-car by himself alone to the doctor's office at Tashiro-cho, Kanda, for the treatment to receive, and on the second day he was able to go to the school, and from the third day he continued to go to the doctor's office on returning way from the school. Thus, after about four weeks from the beginning he has been completely cured.

During the treatment, the analytical examinations of the urine were made every five days at the Medical College of the Keio University. Albuminuria disappeared unawares. After confirming from the medical doctor that there is no more albumen detectable in the urine, the Dr. Fujii's treatment has been discontinued.

I have experienced this treatment so far with great relief and interest, and am now astonished at its wonderful efficacy more than expected, which has been proved so scientifically.

Up to present, 6 or 7 persons in my family, and about 40-50 put together of the family of Mr. Hibiya, his relatives, and acquaintances, received this treatment. Every one of them says that the medical treatment is like the travelling in ancient times, whereas Dr. Fujii's treatment is like that of modern age. In the former, the travelling was made on horse back or on palanquin, when hotel accommodations were very poor, and it took several days before reaching the destination besides no small hardships on the road, whereas in the latter, one can travel in steamships and trains, or motor-cars and aëloplanes, with good accommodations of hotels, and can reach to the destination quicker and surer, enjoying pleasant time whole way through. In the Fujii's treatment, the pains, languidness, itchiness, fever, etc. can be removed first of everything, thus to give the patients less sufferings, and as it can allow the patients to take the food whatever they like the cure can be effected surely. What an advanced treatment it is!

At present, the marvellous efficacy of this treatment is known only to a limited number of persons who received this treatment. But, if it should become known among the medical circles of the world generally, there would be no doubt that investigators of this new treatment would come in swarms around him from all quarters of the world.

The Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment which is good as preventative measures against diseases

by

Yoshinosuke Midzuhashi (age 57),

Business-man.

IT was in last midsummer when I was staying at Ikaho hot mineral spring resort for escaping heat of City in company with the rest of my family, that Mr. Baiko Onoye visited me at my hotel together with his wife, and told me that Dr. Fujii, of whom they were speaking other day, would come down shortly as joint guest to Mr. Utayemon Nakamura, Mr. Kojiro Yoshimura and himself, and that as he comes I should try his treatment. At that time I had no particular diseases to call for the treatment. So I begged an excuse. But, Mr. Onoye was so kind as to explain to me that the Dr. Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is not a sort of ordinary treatment, being entirely different from any of the existing ones, and it is such as one can get prevented from attack of dysentery, cholera, or other prevalent diseases if in summer time, and from pneumonia or influenza in winter time, if he receives this treatment in usual time, even when he has no particular disease. Thus he urged me very strongly to try.

Giving credit to his word, I received Dr. Fujii's treatment once in a day for 10 days, as the doctor happened to stay during that interval in the same hotel "Kogure Kindayu" with me. After returned to Tokyo I continued this treatment at his office, visiting him whenever I find time, counting about 35-36 times in all.

From my experience so far of this treatment on my own person, I can enumerate the following changes I noticed in my general constitution, though I thought at first I had no particular complaints :—

- (1) I became enjoyable sound sleep better than before.
- (2) Meals and motions became regular.
- (3) Became free of the anxiety of getting unwell.
- (4) Never felt fatigue.
- (5) Voice became clearer.

Besides above, I became possessed with a confidence that I would be strong enough to prevent from being affected, in coming winter, with not only cold or nasal catarrh but even with pneumonia or influenza, for which I have to thank Mr. and Mrs. Onoye.

So far as I know, the acupuncture and moxibustion may be given as the most efficacious among various popular treatments, but either of them is painful or hot besides taking long time in practice, and no one would feel inclined to receive such treatments especially when one has no particular disease but for more precaution, whereas the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment can be received in a very short space of time, in a very simple manner, feeling no painfulness or hotness, and applicable for more various diseases than by acupuncture or moxibustion, besides it has preventative effect against all diseases. Everybody who would have tried this treatment might be able to notice that the acupuncture or moxibustion is not a compare in any way with this treatment in the efficacies and many other respects.

I see there every time when I visit Dr. Fujii's office many sick-people are gathering, and all of them are gratifying with this treatment, and from these facts I am now one of the deep admirers of this wonderful treatment. I hope for the happiness of all humanity it will spread all the world.

Gratification of the old having been cured of
up for recovery

by

Mrs. Koyone Yoshizumi (age 49),

Vocalist.

MY mother, aged seventy this year, had been suffering from catarrhal cystitis since ten years, used to wake up every evening after retiring to bed for urine, so often as 10 times even during midnight only, and she was habitually saying that the bladder is very likely hanging lower down. In addition to the above affection, she one day fell on her seat in the kitchen and hurt at the bottom, in consequence of which kept her bed through year-end and new-year. Tried all treatments and remedies, but none of them did her any good, so she herself and rest of the family gave up for the recovery of the old one's chronic affections as sheer impossibility. But fortunate it was, Mr. and Mrs. Baiko Onoye urged us to try Dr. Fujii's treatment, having confirmed, so kind they were, from Dr. Fujii that either the old or young there makes no difference so far as his treatment is concerned, cure or incure only depends upon the nature of diseases, but the old requires so much longer time than the young for recovery as the old is dull in the revival of strength.

Thus, she received his treatment for about two months from May 14th last, and has been cured quite well as was told, and became able to enjoy good sleep every evening, never since bubbling a word about the bladder or keeping bed all through. We were struck with admiration at its wonderful efficacy, and at the same time felt quite relieved of the anxiety and reliable upon the strength of this treatment even for the recovery of old one's affections.

Ever since, my mother places absolute reliance upon the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, and is always saying that every one must be precautious before getting ill. With that in view, she makes it unique pleasure to go and receive Dr. Fujii's treatment as many number of times in a month as she finds convenient.

Next, I myself has been also cured of corpulency about the same time with my mother. Therefore we are so glad as we the parent and child are urging everybody to try his treatment; such as, the families of Mr. Hibiya, president of the Hibiya Bank, Ltd, Mr. Makino, president of the Fudo Savings Bank, Ltd, and Mr. Mikami, member of the House of Peers, all of whom are gratified with the facts that they became very healthy, and tendering to us the thanks for it. It is a thing very pleasant as a human to recommend a good thing to others, and we think so doing it may be a piece of our gratitude shewn for the kindness of Dr. Fujii.

My sentiment of gratitude

by

Miss. Maruko Asai (age 35),

Vocal Musician.

TIME flies swiftly as an arrow, and it has already five years passed since I first visited Dr. Fujii, not at the present but at the previous office at Imagawakoji, to receive his treatment for the chronic stomach and intestinal disease, with kind introduction of Mrs. Shibagaki, chief engineer of the Construction Bureau of the Department for Education, whose recommendation was so ardent as the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment would be the unique treatment for my suffering.

During these five years I was affected with various diseases such as cold, over-eating, spasm of womb, gastralgia, catarrh of the throat, etc., as is usual with almost everybody who is even constituted healthy, and much more is it the case with one who is constitutionally weak like myself. Every time I suffer I received this treatment only, keeping entirely away from medicines ever since I knew Dr. Fujii, which I feel very thankful.

Thus I have been for past five years under Dr. Fujii's treatment every time affected with various sicknesses, and from these results I have been educated with the facts, just as Dr. Fujii told me at first, that most of the vocalists think that voice is uttered from the throat only and are neglecting the importance of the abdominal strength and its sanitation, but we should be aware that the voice must be uttered from and with stress of the abdomen, the throat being the tuner of it. Just same as in the case of face-culture. However you may be particular in caring the face, a real beauty would not be realized if the abdominal sanitation should be neglected. This is really a good instruction to us.

For the proof of it, you may look at my vocal condition as well as complexion, also all other vocalists both females and gentlemen under his treatment, who are all in one voice glad to say that they got well not only in the voice but the complexion as well, so much as became look like some years younger, at which they are surprising.

I now make it a rule to receive this treatment, from abdomen to throat, 4 or 5 times before going for the performance of radio broadcasting, concert, recording of the gramophone, or before starting for travel.

By favour of this treatment I became not only well in the throat and the face but generally stronger. In the middle of last month, I had to travel so far away to Hokkaido for the radio broadcasting, and am glad to state that I did least feel sick or fatigue, whereas formerly I was bound to get sick and fatigue from travelling long way in trains or ships. The efficacy of this treatment is so wonderful.

For us the females who generally consider the beauty of complexion a treasure, and for the musicians the voice the life, the existence of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is a formidable strength. I sincerely hope that all the public will be acquainted with this valuable treatment as early as possible and enjoy the benefit of it as I do.

My experience of having saved my beloved son from the sickness so serious as sentenced by a medical doctor to die

by

Mr. Yoshitomo Hiyama (age 42),

Chief Inspector of the Furukawa Bank, Ltd.

IT was about 4 p.m. on June 4th last, that my eldest son Yasuo aged sixteen had to be laid down in sick-bed in a feverish condition when he returned home from the Middle School. Next morning he began to have a severe diarrhoea, so frequent as 120 times in a day. At once an adjacent doctor was called in and consulted. The doctor diagnosed as acute catarrh of the colon and gave medicines, but got no better. The sickness progressed rapidly next day, so bad as at last affected the brain having fallen into delirious condition, sleepless for four days and night continuously. Even to the eyes of the non-professional could see that death was approaching every moment.

The doctor told us that the symptom shows apparently the meningitis, and the water in the spine must be extracted as the last chance of recovery. I was told, however, that even the water is taken from the spine it cannot be sure to save the life. Death or revival is uncertain but only a chance is to be taken. Even if saved fortunately he would become invalid. In anyway, should he be left as it is he would be sure to die. If he dies resign to it as fate. That was the last sentence the doctor gave.

I would not dare to give any more pains to the dying patient by extracting water from the spine, thus decided at once to consult Dr. Fujii, who some time ago cured the stomach and intestinal trouble of my son, the adiposis of mine, the sciatica of my wife, and the conjunctivitis of my female servant. It was 6 o'clock p.m. when I visited Dr. Fujii at Kanda, city, and asked to visit my son at Gotanda, suburb, though far away from city. He agreed to come at once as the patient was so serious as it does not allow a moment to defer. So he came and gave one treatment. With this one treatment my son came to himself partly, and recovered so well as could discriminate the respective faces of the family and point out each name. With another treatment next morning he, who was so seriously sick, recovered the entire consciousness, and the temperature had been lowered down from 40° to 37.2° .

Another treatment was received in the evening of that day, which reduced in the frequency of bloody bowels very much, and relieved the painfulness, making so well as to appeal want of food. Therefore, gave him rice cooked soft with more water as told by Dr. Fujii, which gave the patient no hindrance whatever. From the third day, the number of the treatment was reduced to once a day, and ordinary meals were served. On the tenth day, he got so well as able to go himself alone to the doctor's office for receiving the treatment. One week after, he has got quite well and attended the school.

Such serious disease as this has been cured beautifully in such short space of time, and now about eight months since no change in his health is observed. He makes it a daily pleasure to go to the school. Such fact as this must be the wonder of the medical circle.

For the patient who could scarcely take a small quantity of liquid food, a large quantity of medicines was forced to take under the medical doctor, therefore it should have affected the internal organs. So, no medicines were given after the second round of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment in secret to the consulting medical doctor. Every day when the medical doctor visited, the patient was seen so noticeably improving. So, the doctor was very much astonished not knowing the secret.

Considering from the above experiences, I have now no hesitation to declare that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation is superior to all the medical treatments of the modern age. Should the medical doctors of the world become awaken and investigate this wonderful treatment, happiness of the human being would be immense. Anybody who should have experienced this treatment would no doubt have the same impressions as myself. In conclusion let me thank Dr. Fujii for the exertions he is making for the rescue of human being at large.

The true merit of the Treatment of Mr. M. Fujii as recognized by me through experiences

by

Mr. Fusajiro Nomura (age 59),
Rear-Admiral of Japanese Navy.

I wish to give here the result of my experiences of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment for my sickness, for just thirty days exclusive of the regular holidays of the doctor, counted from the first day when I visited Dr. Fujii in the morning of the day next to my having been recommended by a friend of mine of same province, Major-General Yokomichi, whose wife is said had been cured perfectly well with three weeks treatment of the ringing in the ear of many years, which was treated severally but incurable by the specialist, besides of a slight affection of the stomach.

The symptoms of my sickness before received this new treatment were such as the abdomen distended, and I was so inappetitive as unable to take the rice cooked so soft as okayu more than two bowlfuls at a meal time, even for the supplementary food such a soft and light kind as possible were particularly selected to take.

Especially at the limbs were felt coldness, on which account I could not enjoy a good sleep in the evening, and were to get up for urine two or three times in the midnight. For this reason or other I felt all the time heavily in the head, so have had not a day cheerful.

I could not walk up the stairs without labour in the breathing which was very trying, and in some distant walking was to get tired very soon.

Nevertheless, after received the treatment of Dr. Fujii, the distention has been removed, and became appetitive so much as impatient for meal-hours, and could take the rice more than 3 bowlfuls, each time with the supplementary food of any kind which were hitherto feared to touch.

The coldness of the limbs has disappeared and became able to enjoy a sound sleep at night without being waken up all through till next morning, when get up with clear head and bright spirit.

No more labour or fatigue is felt now in walking up the stairs or in a long walking or moving about, so well as I tried excursion trip to Shinnasu Summer Resort other day together with some friends of mine and walked about more than one ri on the mountain road over there, but was not at all afflicted.

From my personal experience so far, I can safely state that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is entirely distinguished from other ordinary treatments in its marvellous efficacy for all diseases. Therefore, I wish to inform the public widely and highly of this treatment.

Before conclusion, there is one thing which I must not forget to mention. I was hitherto impressed with an idea that, a man as he grew older must refrain from taking ample meals or must keep always the stomach rather in an empty condition, and when taking meals must select a stuff as soft as possible. So I did, especially recent days when I suffered from stomach troubles, whereas according to Dr.

Fujii that was not correct. The doctor says that I am an old man, so if I wanted to become lively, I must be fed with ample food so long as this new treatment is being received, and that such soft rice as okayu should be discontinued, because an old man tends to become weaker from want of nutrition. No one can become lively unless he takes sufficient food. Generally speaking, children are developing with great vigour and old men are liable to decline even from slight causes, therefore both children and old men should be careful in regard to food, so as to take adequate quantity, one for the development and the other for stopping the decline. Thus the diseases must be solely treated for without regard to the food question.

Having followed this instructions the result was so very good as mentioned in the above lines, reviving the spirit naturally so much as incomparable with previous condition. For me it is a great revolution both spiritually and bodily. In token of my gratitude I have stated the fact as it is.

My experience of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Mr. Noboru Kobayashi (age 39),

Staff-Paymaster of the Japanese Navy.

IT was autumn of 1926 that I received the treatment of Dr. Momotaro Fujii for the first time, when I was affected with the stomach and intestinal diseases. I was under medical treatment in a certain noted hospital in Tokyo, being diagnosed as catarrhal gastritis or dochmiasis, since about one month, but the medicines were not at all efficacious and I was in a great agony. Eventually a friend of mine came and told me that, though we have been taught by long customs to take medicines whenever we get sickness, but now find out by the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment that was a great mistake, and the proper and natural way of curing diseases is to keep away from medicines, and such is the real advanced treatment, thus he introduced me to Dr. Fujii. I visited Dr. Fujii for his treatment for the first time, impelled with great curiosity.

He gave me his treatment, but that was simply to press down lightly every part of the body with a small metallic instrument which gave me neither pain nor itch. During the first treatment I could not help thinking with doubt that such a simple method would not cure my disease. But soon after the treatment got through, I became to feel rather light and warm in my body. So, thinking it a peculiar treatment I continued for three days for trial. Treatment after treatment I became to feel energetic, enjoyable of food and even smoking. Thus, after 8-9 days I got so much better as I did not feel like suffering from any diseases. Therefore, for trial I took a drink of sake from which I had been kept away for long time since, and various other foods considered as indigestive and no good, but none of them gave me ill consequences in any way. I became to look so well as everybody says I became very bright and lively.

I had been under care of a medical doctor of the vicinity also a noted M.D. in a hospital of Tokyo for about fifty days, but not only far from getting better but gradually became weaker, notwithstanding taking the medicines of powder and liquid 6 times a day just as prescribed. In the Fujii's treatment, from the beginning of the treatment, which was only once in a day, I felt accurately the progress of recovery treatment after treatment, therefore I made it a pleasure to visit Dr. Fujii, though I was living so far away from Tokyo at Dzushi. It took only two weeks to get cured completely well. Comparing the two treatments, the medical and Dr. Fujii's Press-Stimulation, I have firmly comprehended that the latter is by far surpassed to the former, and made up my mind to rely upon it in future whenever affected even with slight diseases such as cold or loose bowels. In the spring of the following year, I had a diarrhoea with pain like the dysenteric, and at once received the treatment, and was cured completely with two times.

Whenever injured my digestive organs, 4 or 5 times treatments were sufficient to get cured. The above are the experiences made on my own body. My wife who was always weakly became quite healthy after receiving this treatment for about two weeks, having shown a healthy development in the abdominal part, and increased in weight and bettered in complexion.

Also, when one of my younger brothers was affected with acute typhlitis, he received this treatment two days after laid down in sick-bed. The blind gut was felt hard with fingers about a fist large, and he could not turn round his body on account of the pain being unbearable, with the temperature 39.5° . With one treatment, the hardened part became so soft as could not be felt any more with fingers, the temperature lowered to 37.2° , and could turn round the body without feeling the pain. After the third treatment, he was able to go to the office of Dr. Fujii from Koyenji, suburb, and with 12 times treatments in all recovered perfectly well.

Previous to the above, he received this treatment for the first time, just after I became recognized the superiority of this treatment, for his bronchitis in consequence of bad cold, spitting blood from the throat every morning though not a large quantity, with high temperature and laid up in sick-bed. With only one treatment the blood spitting had been stopped in the next morning, the temperature lowered and good sleep enjoyed. After 5th treatment he was able to go to the doctor's office himself for further treatment, and after two months cured quite well. It is now about two years since, yet he continues to be quite well in the throat and is feeling thankful.

Another younger brother, having fever and frightful pain at the flank probably affected with intercostal neuralgia or pleuritis, received this treatment. With one treatment the fever and the frightful pain were removed, and after about a week's treatments completely cured.

There are many more examples that I can give with reference to the children of my brothers who were cured in various affections. But for doing so it would be almost endless, so I shall stop my pen. Anyhow I feel myself a great pride that we have in Japan such a wonderful invention achieved.

A great gospel to woman in pregnancy and infant at breast

by

Mrs. Teisuke Akiyama (age 46).

Lady Sadako Akiyama is the wife of Mr. Teisuke Akiyama, formerly the president of the newspaper "Niroku Shimbun" and one of the senior members of the political party "Seiyukai."

WE knew Dr. Fujii five years ago when my younger brother's wife, Suyeko, was at her wits' end from the suffering of chronic peritonitis for more than a year. One day Mr. Sesaki, a good friend of my husband, visited and told me that he knows my husband being in disfavour of medicines as he is, and when he was disgusted with medical treatment for his long stomach and intestinal weakness he was recommended by his acquaintance, Mr. Chuzaburo Okumura, a newly invented treatment called the Fujii's Press-Stimulation, which he tried and found very efficacious and became quite healthy, and that, in the said treatment no medicines are used, therefore wish to recommend it for us to try.

Thereupon, I consulted my husband and my younger brother and his wife, and as they all agreed I sent Sadako to Dr. Fujii to receive his treatment. At the beginning of the consultation, Sadako asked Dr. Fujii how many days treatment would be necessary for having her chronic peritonitis cured quite well. To this enquiry Dr. Fujii answered that it would be necessary, if she wants perfect cure, to come for the treatment every day for at least first two months, every other day for next one month, and after that every five days; if she could do so he would guarantee for the perfect cure in six months from the beginning.

She further asked Dr. Fujii by telling that, when she was laid up in a hospital under medical care, she heard the nurses talking that in modern medical treatment it is said absolutely hopeless to get a child for a woman who had been once affected with the peritonitis, therefore must be resigned to it, and now she wants to hear from Dr. Fujii his opinion about it. To this question Dr. Fujii replied that, in the modern medical symptomatic treatment they are unable to effect radical cure of the peritonitis, therefore they say such a thing, but in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment he can effect the radical cure, therefore she needs not be anxious about the matter, as there would be no reason why cannot get a child after restored to perfect health.

Relying upon Dr. Fujii's word, she went to receive his treatment every day for first two months, and every other day for next one month, and then once in five days as was told. Thus, in a little over four months such a long suffered chronic peritonitis had been cured perfectly, and shortly after she conceived a child. All of the family were but astonished at the marvellousness of the treatment.

Next, she asked Dr. Fujii as to the care of health during the pregnancy. To this question Dr. Fujii told her that, it is usually well for the pregnant woman to receive this treatment timely for the guaranty of easy delivery, thus can discard the habit of shampooing the abdomen, and it is the safest especially for her to receive the timely treatment, as it is not only the first time for her to get a child but after such a serious illness.

So, she went again to receive the timely treatment until the month of parturition. As the result of it, she gave birth to a boy-child, and the delivery was very easy for her first experience of it and for its being after such a serious affection. All of the family were again astonished at the correctness of the words of Dr. Fujii, as well as the marvellousness of his treatment.

Further, she asked Dr. Fujii about the care of health after the delivery. Dr. Fujii said that, if there be any abnormal sign in health soon after the delivery, she may be well of course to receive his treatment at any time, otherwise after three weeks from the delivery she may receive the treatment for about three weeks, which will restore blood circulation to normal condition, and she will quickly recover health, thus ensuring also good effect in next delivery. So, she did as was told, and the result was just as the doctor said.

Next, her baby when about a hundred days after born was affected at the trachea and digestive organs, and caused some apprehension, was brought under his care. This also has been perfectly cured, and since then the growth became distinctly better.

From those various experiences we all became believers in Dr. Fujii's treatment, and any time when my husband and myself, son, brother and sister, and even servants feel unusual such as slight cold, fever, stomach troubles, or even fatigue, we immediately ask for his treatment and are gratifying.

Previous to this, we had been always subjected to some uneasiness when a woman with child or an infant at breast was affected with any acute disease, because the efficiency of the medicine was so little for its largeness of the risk of secondary reaction. But, once we knew Dr. Fujii we have been relieved from the uneasiness. It must be a great gospel to a family having pregnant woman and infant at breast.

Lastly, I wish to tender my sincere gratification again to Dr. Fujii for his Press-Stimulation Treatment, with which my sister-in-law, Sadako, who was once said, whilst under the medical treatment, hopeless to get a child, is now a mother of two children, and both the mother and children are enjoying excellent health.

My impressions of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Dr. Ryosuke Funahashi,

Kogaku Hakushi (Doctor of Mine Engineering)

I am by profession the Doctor of Mine Engineering formerly taking the chair of the Mine Engineering Department in the Tokyo Imperial University, and have special interest in the study of opening up mineral resources in wider sense by application of the dressing art. For instance, there are sources of wealth lying in several mineral deposits, which were hitherto considered as absolutely valueless among the specialists. I have succeeded in opening some of them after many years investigations, and a monument of a deep significance and authoritative influence was raised in commemoration of the deed and success. I make such a deed to achieve always an ideal of my special profession, and am at present entertaining nothing else in my mind except inspiration of the love of minerals. Now then, what was the motive which led me to write here my impressions regarding the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, while I am an entire outsider of the medical art? Let me tell you the whole story.

I always think it as too much when I see so frequently that everybody, whenever gets some sickness, has to be subjected to so much worry and heartache in running about for doctors, taking medicines, receiving treatment, engaging nurses, or going into hospital, etc., etc. I myself having been brought up under Spartan-like discipline from boyhood never thought of relying upon medicines, on which account I used to be placed with complaints by rest of my family whenever any one is affected with disease, that I am too much indifferent to calling in doctors so soon as he wants, and that I am so unkind and unsympathizing. Whenever I feel myself queer in my stomach, I at once go out in the garden and take appropriate exercises, such as cleaning the ground with broom in the belief that the exercises are much more help for digestion and refreshment than the medicines.

Let me question whether the medicinal or injection treatment is only good for relieving patients from sufferings for the temporary, and not up to the fundamental truth of the curing art, or not. The medicines good for headache may not be good for stomach, or the purgative may weaken the heart. In order to neutralize the reactions in such case as above, you may compound with some neutralizer, but could you weigh such neutralizer exactly to the quantity necessary and appropriate? In my opinion, instead of using such medicines for curing diseases some non-medical way should be applied to the fundamental cause of disease, so as to restore blood circulation and anagenesis in order, thus better effect would be realized than by medicines.

My wife suffered from unbearable headache and abdominal tympany, and had been under several noted specialists and trying almost all treatments for many years, but no radical cure was effected, only relieving from the sufferings for the temporary, perhaps owing to the medical treatment being

Thus, the sufferings come back soon after cured, and every time had to try this and that medicines, as if subjected to the experiment of medicines. We all in the family had been in no small degree agonizing.

Eventually, once when we visited after the sick mother of my wife suffering from goal stone, we have had the pleasure of meeting with Dr. Fujii who was attending the treatment of the mother, and my wife happened to try his treatment for the first time and continued it for a while. So far till present, Dr. Fujii's treatment seems to have proved significantly good effect upon her, so much as she is exceedingly glad, saying all sufferings have gone away.

Recently when my daughter was affected with acute diarrhœa, my wife took the daughter at once under the care of Dr. Fujii, instead of calling in medical doctor in hurry, which was usual for her in such case as this. It was entirely from her voluntary decision that she took the daughter to Dr. Fujii, as she has now full confidence in his treatment. She did not ask my consent though I should not object to it of course. Just as we expected the daughter was cured quite well after a few times treatment in only two days. In the usual medical treatment it was certain that no such quick cure could have been expected.

I am very much delighted with the fact that, we are now able to find our home full of cheers since my wife got so well, and that she became able, same as I do, to keep away absolutely from the medicines with which she had been in intimate relation for many years. I only regret that I had not come across with this treatment earlier.

In an ecstasy of joy, I have written only a fragment of my impressions as above, for the crops raised in my family by favour of this treatment have been by far above my estimate. Should opportunity allows, I would like to write an additional.

Joy of Resuscitation

by

Mrs. Ryosuke Funahashi (age 43),

The following is the whole copy of the article contributed by Lady Sawako Funahashi, wife of Mr. Ryosuke Funahashi, Doctor of Mine Engineering, on the Female News (Fujō Shimbun) of Sept. 23rd last, which being the most popular and oldest newspaper for females:—

I have been bringing up my children, four boys and one girl, in past 25 years, during which time I was very often subjected to worries and anxieties in looking after their health, especially when they were affected with sickness, sometimes of rather a serious nature such as whooping cough, measles, acute pneumonia, asthma, peritonitis perforatum, scarlet fever, summer diarrhœa, etc. In the above cases, I had to take them to a hospital for medical treatment or surgical operation, but in many cases I could not help feeling very irritable at the inconsistency of the medical treatment.

In every case three or four M.D. or B.M. were consulted, but I always found them far from scratching at the itchy part, and the progress of the diseases was in no degree retarded. Take for instance, when my eldest boy was affected with asthma a doctor over-injected with solution of adolinarine, thereby caused spasmodic fit fearfully, and we were very much scared if he would die.

Next boy, when at age of six, were given a compound of calomel and santonine, but by mistake of the doctor the calomel used was such as affected with corrosive action, thereby caused peritonitis perforatum, and the boy was pretty near killed. Such case as this tells as if the medicines were used for killing purpose.

Such cases as above were experienced not only in my children but myself also. About three years ago, when was just after recovered from affection of influenza, I wanted some good tonic to remove the weakness after the affection. Doctor recommended me the iodide of culcium injection. He gave me thirty eight injections in about hundred days. After about ten injections from the first one, I began to feel rather unusual through whole body, but so saying continued the injections. The condition got gradually worse, and finally became so bad as the limbs trembled, the eyes were dizzy, the headache and the beating of the heart furious, and had eruptions all over the body, thereby unable to sit and had to lay up in sick-bed at last. Thus, I had to get further injections and medicines for doing good for the above new affections. The result was the weakness increased, flow of blood from the throat and the intestines. The doctor diagnosed as catarrh of the colon, on which account had to take purgative, keeping away from food until gradually allowed to take liquid stuff. After some long time in sick-bed the intestinal affection was cured, but the weakness remained incured or rather advanced more than ever, feeling constant headache all year round. For last two years I had been without feeling like self, and always looking for if there would not be some advanced treatment.

At this juncture, I happened to know that Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is the most cultured treatment in the present medical circle throwing brilliant light upon it, thereupon hurried to receive the first treatment on July 14th last. At first I was doubting whether the long stubborn headache as mine would be cured or not. But, in the course of the treatment after treatment I began to feel brighter and brighter in the spirit, thus missing the affections entirely. First in my life cheerfulness was felt after so long a suffering, as I have been saved with the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment. All of my family are very glad of it.

During my visits at the office of Dr. Fujii about ten times in all, many a patient were seen cured of various diseases, of which one most struck me was of acute diseases, such as acute stomach and intestinal affections. The curing effect on these affections were unique. I thought I would ask this treatment immediately if anyone of my children should happen to suffer from diarrhœa etc.

In the beginning of last month, I went down to the sea-shore at Choshi, Chiba Prefecture, taking my children with me to pass the summer vacation. Usually I feel giddy and headache when I face at the glittering reflections of the sun-shine upon sea surface, that makes my stay at sea-shore very unpleasant, but this time I have had least of such trouble passing all the time quite lively. As we were enjoying most pleasant time over there, my daughter, aged fourteen, who had a few years ago the cholera infantum, scared me by being affected suddenly with a bad diarrhœa counting seven times in the mid-night for lavatory. Next morning when I examined the secretion, I was surprised to find it was in a mucilaginous state looking just same as that of the last affection. I at once had to return to Tokyo accompanied with the sick daughter to receive Dr. Fujii's treatment. It was about 8 o'clock in the evening when we reached there, after the office closed up. Dr. Fujii gave her specially the treatment at once and another at the interval of about one and half hours. Next day, the motion was reduced to only once and in a solid state. What a magic-like, no one perhaps can imagine. She was allowed to take usual meals after the treatment. Further treatments, once in the morning and once in the afternoon of that day, and two times next day, altogether six times were received. Dr. Fujii then advised that, we may go back to the sea-shore for bathing as the daughter is now quite well. She was dancing in joy. So we went back taking the train for Choshi, enjoying the railway luncheon "bento" on the train. She has been recovered quite well and cheerful. Just imagine she was the same girl, who went to Tokyo two nights before, suffering from the pain of diarrhoea whole way through with pale looking face.

So far as my experience goes, this treatment is no doubt the most reliable one, whereas I cannot help thinking that the modern medical treatment has many things regrettable as compared with this new treatment. Suppose here was a child affected with acute diarrhoea and was taken to a medical doctor for consultation. First thing the doctor does would be to give oil purgative and/or rectile injection, restricting to at first liquid food, and gradually next "Omajiri" (rice soup with a few grains of rice mixed) or "Okayu" (gruel). It would take at least ten to fourteen days before allowed to take usual solid meals. Thus the weakness would continue for long time even after the diarrhœa had been cured. I believe everybody should have experienced the same thing more than once.

All mothers should have in the course of bringing up children subjected to the anxieties same as I experienced, sometimes so much as shorten their own lives in case the children should get sickness acutely and feared of seriousness.

Dr. Fujii, while he has invented such marvellous treatment, does never attempt to advertize largely in newspapers for name and interest, consequently many of the public are quite uninformed of the existence of such a precious treatment. I therefore write this article to your newspaper so as to give the readers some idea of this new treatment from my own experience. Let me wish that the sufferers of sickness would be saved as many as possible with this Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

Mrs. R. Funahashi is one of our patron readers for twenty years and she is not a lady who would make false informations. Therefore, we may believe that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is sure to give the marvellous efficacy for all diseases.

Valuable experience of having made narrow escape from surgical operation

by

Mrs. B. Nakagawa (age 43),

Ex-Governor of Osaka Prefecture.

I am now passing this spring-like weather in a quite pleasant and vivacious spirit, of which I am so glad. It is nothing but the gift of Dr. Fujii for which I can only tender my heartfelt thanks.

During last summer time, I had been in intimacy with sick bed all through, owing to the female weakness in consequence of the bleeding after miscarriage having continued for long time, causing pain at waist part. Thus passed very gloomy days. In latter part of August last, the bleeding stopped for four or five days, but came back again as I had to force myself in nursing the youngest child who had a bad cold with fever. Thus, it continued again for several days gradually getting worse. The doctor whom I had been consulting told me that I would not be cured unless enter into a hospital and receive surgical operation. I had been discouraged by such a sentence given, and confined in bed with no more courage to get up.

Eventually I came to recollect that Mr. Funahashi, Doctor of Mine Engineering and a friend of my husband, was speaking once highly of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, and thought to try that treatment. Thus after learning more about it from Dr. Funahashi through my husband, I was introduced to Dr. Fujii to receive the treatment for the first time.

Dr. Fujii, after giving me the first treatment carefully at once, told me as follows :—

“ People are generally aware of the fact that the modern medication treatment has already run up against wall, but they still think that the surgical operation has made a marvellous advance. But in my opinion, how could we call it an advanced while they are unable to cure such complaints as yours unless with knives? We may call it an advanced if they were able to cure such disease without using knives. They should try to avoid as much as possible the use of knives, even in case where the operation is thought necessary. They seem to be quite unconcerned in making people cripple or leaving a scar on the skin. It may be called the advance in the art of cutting flesh, but not in the curing diseases. How long since the bleeding may have been continuing there is no necessity of surgical operation, which is the primitive way of the treatment.”

Upon hearing this, I felt as if raised from death. Dr. Fujii told me to come for about sixty days to receive the treatment. I thought I would not regret even seventy days it has to take, if cured with this treatment, which is far more desirable than the surgical operation. Increased in vigour I returned home light footed.

Next morning when I got up, I found feeling very well. The bleeding, which was continuing for so long time, has stopped. No one perhaps would believe that only one time treatment does that work, but it is the fact.

From about third day, the pain at the waist part began to be forgotten. No afflictions whatever were felt after every day movement, whereas formerly a little outdoor exercise made me tiresome, so bad as I used to lay down myself in the room as soon as get in.

It was often the case that, in the Government Electro-Railway unable to get seated and had to stand up all the way through. In such case, the first once or twice I felt some little pain at the abdominal part, but in returning home after the treatment I forgot it. On the fifth day, no more such pain was felt, and on the sixth and seventh, both bodily and mentally, I became to feel so light and well that it made me think no more treatment would be necessary.

Dr. Fujii told me at first to come for 60 days. So I expected to do so with great hope and pleasure to become quite a different good constitution. The book-ticket of the railway for one month had been bought for the purpose. On the eighth day, Dr. Fujii told me I would not be required to come every day, or perhaps no more treatment would be necessary. In fact I myself was also feeling so. Just imagine the suffering for more than two months incurred under medical treatment has been cured in only eight times of this treatment and became quite vivacious.

Really, it is like a fancy in dream. Suppose if I were taken into a hospital for surgical operation as the medical doctor advised me at first, I would have been still remaining in the hospital agonizing. I could not help shivering when I turn back to it.

This year it was very unlucky for me as confined in sick-bed for so long a time, but now I feel very lucky to be able to know Dr. Fujii, and am thanking for him.

I feel now very stout-hearted myself. For a domestic wife nothing would be more worrying than to have anyone in the family affected with illness. But, now I became quite strengthened after knowing Dr. Fujii and shall entertain no more fear of diseases. How I feel stronger no one can imagine. I am always thankful and recommending this treatment to every body whom I come across.

Whilst I was writing so far, a telephone reached to me from a friend of mine, Mrs. Akiho, wife of the president of the Imperial Museum, to whom I recommended this treatment other day, thus:—

“I went to Dr. Fujii to whom you were so kind to introduce me, and received his treatment for about 10 days, the result of which was very good, feeling neither fatigue nor weight of my body, which were before apt to be felt very heavy and tiresome perhaps owing to my fatty constitution. My daughter is also very glad to say that her habit of getting stiff-neck has been removed with this treatment. I wish to report you so far. Please excuse for my not having done so earlier, etc”.

I think the appearance of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment must be a great strength for the sufferers of sickness. Every one who is cured with this treatment should speak of it highly to other sufferers, who will be cured and also speak of it well to others, thus mutually can get the favour of this valuable treatment among ourselves.

the Eastern Star.*

MY boy 5 years of age was born very weak as if hereditary to the weak parent. Every spring and autumn he gets sickness from weak stomach, and that was the seed of our anxieties.

He has been cured quite well by Dr. Fujii, the stomach becoming very strong and the spirits lively. Thus our anxieties have been removed.

Herewith I wish to tender my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Fujii and hope all sick-people will likewise enjoy the benefit of this marvellous treatment.

Moved by the marvellous efficacies of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Mr. Shino Murata (age 55),

Lieutenant General.

I heard from my friends, Major General Yokomichi of the Army and Rear-Admiral Nomura of the Navy, that they experienced the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment and find it a peculiar new treatment having a marvellous efficacies on all diseases, also from my relative Tanaka more precisely about it, as in the latter-named family they are especially glad that five in all, including parents and children, have been quite healthy this year, so much as rarely seen of late years and none of them have had a cold even. However, for outsiders it is hard to estimate its great value through stories only. As our grand-child, 4 years old, who had been suffering from weakness of the stomach and intestines after the measles, was found very badly exhausted of late, we took him to Dr. Fujii with a view to try the said treatment on him principally, and taking the opportunity on myself and wife, also friend of mine Lieut-General Kishi and his wife all together. Though there were some differences in the length of time required according to the nature, but all our different affections have been cured equally well with but one instrument. It was really a wonder even more than spoken of.

Especially so in the case of our grand-child, who has been perfectly cured in one week, making him quite a new person after the first one treatment, enabling him to enjoy any kind of food, making him remarkably courageous, and every morning soon after the breakfast he used to urge us in his childish tongue to take him to Dr. Fujii for the treatment, and as a rule led us cheerfully, always walking ahead of the company. Most of children do not like going to a hospital for treatment, but in the case of our grand-child he makes it a pleasure perhaps because the treatment is so simple and makes him feel well and enjoyable in eating. Anyhow, the fact that, even by such a little child, who is not yet capable of discerning things, this treatment is welcomed, should be sufficient to praise it as marvellous and most advanced new treatment.

What we hear a hundred times is no better than what we see once. So with the greatness and true merits of this treatment, which can be recognized only by experience.

Once we have recognized the wonderful value of this treatment in person, we should do something good in sympathy with other sick-people or humanity at large, and we think such is the human sentiment. Lieut-General Kishi, Major-General Yokomichi and myself have coincided in the opinion, and for that reason we decided to hold a meeting of the military officers above the rank of Major-General on May 15th next at the military club "Kaiko-sha" at Kudan, City, inviting Dr. Fujii as guest and requesting him to give lecture on the subject "How diseases should be cured?".

Should the above meeting be an incentive to many similar meetings one after another in all directions among intellectual class of people, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment would become known more and more, and naturally so much more sick-people would be saved. Then our delight shall be more than anything else.

Hoping all the noted medical doctors of the World will make investigations

by

Mrs. Koichi Sugimura (Koko), (age 49),

Lady Koko Sugimura is the wife of H. E. Koichi Sugimura, late Japanese Ambassador at Berlin, and a niece to Prince Saionji, one of the elder statesmen of the Restoration.

WHEN I was twenty three years of age, I went to Mexico, where was the post of my husband, and in January of the following year had been favoured with a child. It was some time after the delivery that I was affected with mastitis, and at last had to receive a great surgical operation, which made me taste painful experience for over two months. Over and above I was affected with diphtheria and malarial fever of bad nature successively. Such constant suffering from serious illnesses caused me at last to suffer from the megrim and the atony of the stomach, on which account I never had been appetitive, but had to sit for meals perforce simply because time commands. The head was all the time aching and the stomach bubbling as if an ice-bag in it. My suffering was so great and indescribable.

Transferred to European posts until finally held the office at Berlin, where I availed myself of the opportunity in consulting many a noted German medical doctors, but they have done me no good at all. Thus it made me exceedingly pessimistic, and my suffering was as ever so great. However, as wife of a diplomat resident in foreign country, I was quite so busy as it does not allow me to rest, therefore had only to persevere and attend my own vocation.

In the year when Great War broke out, we returned to our dear native land of Japan after twelve years absence. After returned to Japan, I was also under several noted medical doctors, but they said the stomach troubles came from the head, and the megrim was due to the stomach trouble, but a mere saying as such did me good for nothing, and my suffering was as ever so great. Whilst in the agony we met with the last great earthquakes disaster, which rased Tokyo city and the surrounding eastern provinces, and it gave me very much affliction in consequence of the over-work I had been subjected to beyond my health. The megrim became so furiously aching, as sometimes I had to abstain from taking food for even two days, and confine myself in a dark room for the remedy, feeling no worth of living.

On Oct. 3, 1928, an intimate friend of mine, Mrs. Matagi, wife of the director of the Japan Motor Car Co., Ltd, took me to Dr. Fujii, and I received his treatment for the first time. Since I continued his treatment I became so well as I have never been laid up in sick-bed up to present. I have no proper words to express my gratification of it.

Turning back the past twenty five years, I had been all the time suffering so much from serious sickness, and now through the kind treatment of the Dr. Fujii's Press-Stimulation I find myself so well as able to enjoy daily meals, gained flesh and colour, and gradually restoring spirits feeling unaccountably lively. In this progress, if I continue the treatment further till end of this spring season I feel sure to be cured perfectly well.

I must confess, however, that for the first two months I felt no effect of the treatment, and thought such a simple treatment as that would not cure my long diseases, which even the noted medical doctors of either Germany or Japan could do me no good at all. But goaded by the pain, I continued to receive the treatment untiringly. Contrary as it was, I began to feel better since about middle of the third month, and by this time of the fourth month I became distinctly the believer of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, so much as impressed that even serious chronic cases can be positively cured if brought under care of Dr. Fujii for necessary length of time.

I now sadly recall to mind the wife of my son, who died from sickness at her twenty fourth year of age. It is of no avail to complain now, but I regret that if I had known Dr. Fujii at that time she would have been saved. Therefore I am very anxious by some means or other to make the public know of this treatment as early as possible, and must request Dr. Fujii to do his best for the saving of sick-people as largely as possibly he can, and at the same time sincerely hope those noted medical doctors in Germany and Japan, whom I consulted before, will make serious investigations on this marvellous treatment of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation for the sake of human being of the world.

The new treatment which is worthy of investigations of the medical scientists

by

Mrs. Chikao Matagi (age 34),

Lady Kameko Matagi is the grand-daughter of late Baron Kihachiro Okura and the wife of Mr. Chikao Matagi, director of Japan Motor Car Co., Ltd.

FOR about two years after my last delivery of child, I had been suffering from chronic intestinal catarrh, having loose bowels two or three times in a day, besides the pain in the abdomen and the insomnia at night, in a great agony nobody knows.

As recommended very sincerely I asked Mr. and Mrs. Baiko Onoye to accompany me to Dr. Fujii, and received the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment for the first time. It was on Sept. 20th last.

On that day I received the treatment only once, but the effect was so large as I became able to enjoy good sleep that night; after the third treatment the loose bowels stopped and became ordinary, and the abdominal pain ceased; and after three weeks treatment all affections have been perfectly cured, while I gave up during the treatment the use of any medicine for stopping the loose bowels, a haustus, or a soporific. I could not but wonder at it. As the effect of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment was so marvellous as above for my affections, my mother, my husband and children, as well as servants, received his treatment for their various diseases, and were all cured miraculously.

I do not know anything about the theory of "All diseases are due to one single source" as Dr. Fujii declares, or it may be "All diseases are due to all different sources", but considering from our past experience, in the medical treatment they give three different medicines for three different affections as in the case of myself, and such three different medicines have to be taken every day at certain hours as prescribed, say after or before meals or turning in. It looks no matter if habituated, but is rather a thing troublesome to carry it out every day in right hours. Yet, if the troubles thus taken can be compensated with any expected benefit of the medicines we may be able to endure, but if such troubles were to be merely taken over and over every day yet little benefit of the medicines were realized after all, how great the patient's disappointment would be imaginable.

In contrast to the medical treatment which is so troublesome, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment can be applied at one and short time, with one and same treatment for even three or five different affections and complications, which any one patient is suffering from, and though it may be necessary sometimes according to the nature of the affections to repeat the same treatment a certain number of times, yet it can accomplish the object of the cure-diseases in a most simple and positive manner. It makes me think, therefore, that the Dr. Fujii's treatment is a far more improved than the complicated medical treatment in all directions, as well as in the saving of time, money and labour.

From the standpoint of a weakly people like myself, I may say that, as a curing art of diseases, no matter whether it may be medical, mechanical, or physio-therapeutic, such a treatment as would remove the sufferings simply and perfectly, and in shortest space of time as possible, is always welcomed by them.

Considering from various points as given above, I think that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, which is so simple and perfect in the way and can give speedy and marvellous efficacy upon various diseases, must be the one of which the medical scientists of the world should at once make serious study.

A gospel to the patients of skin disease

by

Mr. Yoshitane Honda (age 65),

Formerly Director of a local Normal School.

FOR past 17 years I had been suffering from eczema at the neck. Although I received treatment of a dermatologist almost every day, besides taking the patent medicines of various colours such as red, white, yellow and purple etc., and trying more than 10 different mineral hot spring bathings, such as Beppu, Hinagu etc., but cure was only for the temporary and at any time the disease come back again. The torment of itchness cannot be imagined unless one has experienced in himself.

With only 50 times treatment of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation, starting from July 10 last, the eczema has been cleanly cured. It is really a wonder, and I do not know any other proper word to express my approbation. I write here my impression so far as above from the fact, so that all the brothers and sisters of the world, who suffer from eczematous afflictions, may be informed of this new treatment, as I heartily sympathize with them.

Tendering thanks for the miraculous effect of your treatment

by

Mr. Keiji Yamamoto (age 48),

Formerly Professor of Nara Female Higher Normal School, Now the proprietor of the Baifukan Publisher.

Dr. M. Fujii,

Dear Sir,—Whilst the lingering summer of this year is still so very hot as if taken place of the dog-days, I am very much delighted that you are making strenuous efforts ever so much in good health, holding in the hand the wonderful therapeutic instrument day and night for the happiness of sick-people.

I am very glad to inform you that I am also quite well, having been in no way afflicted through this hot weather, and am busily engaging in my office in such a healthy condition as no one would think that I am the very same person, who gave a lot of anxieties to his friends from the weakness a few months ago, before the beginning of this summer.

Just yesterday a friend of mine came from the west and visited me. We had long conversations between us, but seeing me in the excellent health he neglected to say a word after my sickness. It recalled me a new gratitude for your simple yet wonderful treatment.

Let me now turn back to the past. My intestinal weakness was progressing to so worse a condition as nearly a chronic just after last great earthquakes, and it influenced the stomach so badly as was said to have advanced next to the ulceration about January last. Many a medical doctor was consulted, and for about half a year I have had to observe strictly the rules in regard to the care of diet and all sanitations as instructed by the medical doctor, until about April-May, when though the affected part of the stomach was said to have been improved very much but the general spirit in no degree restored, adversely becoming weaker and weaker, occasionally causing diarrhœa or rising of the temperature to 38° or so. Thus the long affected intestines were not only incured but their action became more and more declined. Generally speaking, my weakness was progressing gradually towards serious condition.

I first knew your name from Mr. Yoshitane Honda, who was so kind as to take me to your office. I do not forget it was about two months ago on July 10 last, that I received your first treatment. At that time, I was so weak as I thought it would be hard for me to pass this summer time under the heat of Tokyo, and was thinking of going out of town. So, I did little inclined to receive any more new treatment, besides, to tell the truth, I doubted such a simple treatment would not do me good, having already tried almost all other treatments but without avail. But, I at last decided and visited you as Mr. Handa persued me to try anyhow and see if I was not fooled by him.

In next morning, after received your first treatment on previous day, I met with a memorable event in my life that I had a very pleasant motion, which was so refreshing that I could never forget, because I have never had for last several years such a pleasant motion, but always painstaking and unpleasant ones, perhaps same as everybody who suffers from intestinal weakness. That of July 11 was really a pleasant and refreshing motion, not speaking a lie. It was for this reason that I made up my mind to continue your treatment, which I was doubting at first. Relying upon your assurance that you would be sure to cure my chronic affection, so long as under your care, though might not in a short time, I continued every day to receive your treatment, with a firm resolution to do so long as you would deem necessary.

In spite of your word "might not cure in a short time", I became feeling appetitive day by day, treatment after treatment, and at the same time the spirit reviving. Usually my eyes were wakeful in the midnight and hazy and sleepy in the morning, but in about one week from your first treatment I became sleepy in the night, and very bright and wake up in the morning. That was a marvellous change in my constitution.

The treatment was received all through till August 14, except your regular holidays. In the beginning of July last, I was thinking to get escaped out of the city from the hotness as soon as possible, but such thought was utterly forgotten as the treatment went on. In fact I felt no necessity of carrying such thought out as the treatment progressed. Thus after about one month treatment, I found myself more than ever healthy, so much as my friend forgot to enquire after my sickness as stated hereinbefore.

The chronic stomach and intestinal diseases, from which I was suffering for past several years, has now been cured as if wiped off clean, and I am now incomparably healthy, even to the condition of mine before January last when I got the sickness. You cannot imagine how I am feeling grateful.

Further I wish to mention my sense of gratitude for the result of your treatment on my suffering in the surfeit, which was cured with only three times treatment without a medicine or any restriction to food, in such a manner as if a scribble in bold hand on a glass plate wiped off clean, leaving not a bit of the trace of it behind. I cannot but wonder at the strength of your treatment.

Not only my long chronic disease has been cured so simply and surely, but my family and friends have been favoured with same marvellous effect for their various sufferings, for which I feel grateful indeed too.

I sincerely hope that this simple and perfect new treatment will be recognized by the public very soon, and it will save all the sufferers of diseases from agonies, and further it will be extended to all the world for the increase of happiness of human being. As for myself, I think it my desire and duty to distribute the same gratitude and happiness, as I felt, to as many people as possible.

Thanking you by stating my recent condition and wishing you a great success,

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) Keiji Yamamoto.

Commending the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Mr. Tomo-o Kikuchi (age 40),

AS to the mavelous efficacy of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, it has been already enough approved by numerous persons of higher names, therefore for me it may be needless to repeat same thing, but from my earnest desire to commend this treatment widely to the public, I will give here some of the impressions I got of this treatment through my own experience.

It was for the numbness of the sensory nerves caused by the slackened functions of anagenesis, or commonly called kakke (beri-beri), that I was treated by Dr. Fujii. The most significant symptoms were the constipation and the numbness of facial nerves. Before coming to receive his treatment, I used to take barley instead of rice for every day meals, and the oryzanin which is said good being rich in Vitamin B, just as I was bidden by the medical doctor, besides all such other specific remedies as said good, taking all possible precautions as to the sanitation, avoiding anything said no good. But, from none of the above morbid symptoms I was relieved after lapse of two months, or even after three months. Just then, I knew Dr. Fujii by kind introduction of Mr. Keiji Yamamoto, and became to receive his Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

Dr. Fujii immediately set about the treatment for my kakke. This treatment was very simple and gentle in spite of its name reading somehow very rough. To define more exactly, it gives a very gentle pressure on the abdomen, throat, face, neck, shoulders, back, arm, and legs, or wherever the affection lies, at the vital parts, with the tip of an instrument something like a golden-rod about a hand-ful large. The treatment take only about five minutes or even less, giving neither hurt nor pain, leaving neither scars nor marks behind, and requiring no medicines of any kind. It must be the most grateful thing if any serious diseases should be cured so easily with such a simple treatment. My first impression of this treatment, therefore, was that either the young or old may receive it with ease and pleasure.

Whilst the treatment was going on, Dr. Fujii inquired after me and of the progress after each treatment, and told me I should refrain from all medicines, also from the barley meals, but should take rice meals or whatever ordinary. By the ordinary meals is of course meant the usual diet which any healthy people usually takes, consisting of the rice as principal and other table-luxuries as supplementary or side-dishes. Dr. Fujii's direction as such widely differs from that of the medical doctors. In the latter, kakke is considered to have cause to the want of Vitamin B in the food, and often known under the by-name of innutritious disease, therefore the first importance is placed on food selection. Thus, I was impressed that Dr. Fujii, in giving me such unordinary direction as above in regard to the food, must have in his mind some deep and firm confidence.

At his office there were seen always many patients waiting. All of them were talking their gratitudes without a single exception, and not one deploring. That shows evidently the efficacy of this treatment being absolute.

Such a scene can never be seen in other dispensaries or hospitals, and everybody would be satisfied even to look at the scene.

At first when I received this treatment, I took notice that this and the acupuncture and moxibustion have some likeness. I naturally disliked the acupuncture and moxibustion without tasting them, but some time ago, when my wife was given up for recovery from some serious sickness under medical care, made her try them as last means like a drowning man catches at a straw. Fortunate it was, she had been cured with them quite well, and became more than ever strong. Since I was giving my heart to the acupuncture and moxibustion, in which they have no concern with medicines, but only a momentary stimulation is given at the vital parts of the nervous systems, like the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, which differs only in pressing the parts instead of puncturing or burning the skin. Thus, I thought these two very much resemble each other in the principle.

Even then, the acupuncture and moxibustion have one large defect, that they give patients some uneasiness or fear on account of the fearful pain they inflict upon the patients who receive these treatments, consequently any timid patient would not care for. Besides, those who practise these treatments are mostly learned hereditarily and have little scientific stability, that also makes people feel uneasy. As the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is free from all such faults, I gradually became conscious that my own disease would be cured with it. Dr. Fujii told me that the numbness is the worst of cure, therefore at least two and a half months it would take to cure it. Just as told I continued his treatment.

To my great joy, however, before so many days have expired, my constipation, so bad as it was, had been cured so well as to have had regular motions every day, and the facial numbness gradually abated, and after one and a half months, or in nearly half the estimated time, none of those morbid symptoms have been left incured.

During these one and a half months, I had at times some irregularities for which I have had to receive his treatment. I shall write some of them.

About the beginning of this treatment, even a slight work made me feel stiff-neck, unbearably painful. I told Dr. Fujii about that trouble and received treatment. With his deliberate treatment the trouble has been cured in less than an hour, and since then I became absolutely free from the trouble even after a pretty hard work.

Next, when I found, for some reason or other, my left eye was congested very badly in the white, I received his special treatment twice, and have been cured clean.

Again, I had a severe indigestion, and suffered all night through. The temperature rose very high in next morning. I received treatment three times, staying at his house from about noon time till 10 p. m., and have been cured so well as I became able to take diet in that night, and next day I have been quite well to take usual diet, having no more unpleasant gas collected in the bowels.

From these three experiences, I knew that the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment has quick and marvellous efficacies upon any acute diseases.

In only one and a half months time, my kakke has been perfectly cured. Not only no prognostic weakness I felt, but was restored so well as I could get up at 6.30 every morning and engage in my professions without afflictions till 2 o'clock midnight, so busily as I could hardly find time for meals. Moreover, my many years suffering of constipation has been forgotten, doing away with a stomachic and peptic. You can imagine how great my joy was. Here-with a few Japanese odes in approbation of this treatment :—

(Literal translation)

- (1) I think and doubt of my own self recovering every moment from sickness with the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.
- (2) Suffered yesterday and forget today the disease for which I received the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.
- (3) How can I doubt now, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment has cured my weakness.
- (4) In the godly efficacy of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment I am glad I have also been shared.
- (5) By virtue of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment which was unknown even in the ancient age of gods I have been cured of illness.

In token of my sincere gratitude, I wish to make all sick-people in the world know of this treatment and commend it to them. But for so doing, I regret to say I am no authority of the line. However, I think I can give two or three points which touched me to the heart from my experience so far as afore-stated.

First: In the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, there is absolutely no risk of making error of diagnosis.

In the modern medical treatment, the doctors first of all examine the patients by the symptoms and then diagnose the nature of the diseases from which they are suffering. Medication or operation is decided upon such diagnosis according to the nature. Therefore, should such diagnosis be erroneous the result would be dreadful. However efficacious the medicines may be, or the surgical art skillful, such erroneous treatment or operation would not only be effectless but often the means to kill the lives.

Whereas, in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, the treatment is not based on the diagnosis, but on the symptoms, according to which only a slight gentle pressure and stimulation are given at the vital part of the nervous systems from over the skin. Therefore, there cannot be in any way the apprehension of the erroneous diagnosis being made. Even if any error should have been made in the judgement of the symptoms, the slight pressure or stimulation thereby given at wrong part of the body would do no harm, but rather give some good effect upon that part. It is really the safest of the safest treatment.

Secondly: In the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, it is never thought of the secondary reactions because he never uses medicines of any kind.

Whatever devices are said to have been made in the recent medicines so to give no secondary reactions, it cannot be safe if such medicines are to be taken for long intervals by sick-people. Even after a skillful surgical operation one often fails to keep original health. How much more is it the case with cheap medicines or unskillful operation! Comparing with these, I cannot but admire the safeness of the treatment of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation, in which it uses no medicines but give a slight pressure and stimulation from over the skin.

Thirdly: In the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, it is one of the special features that he can allow patients of any disease usual meals to take, therefore the patients would not get enfeebled.

Whereas, in the modern medical treatment, for not only stomach weakness but for any disease they restrict to a certain food or commend to refraining from any food but beverage, therefore the patients get enfeebled in consequence of the poor nutritions, hence the cure is prolonged, and even after cured it takes long time before general constitution is restored to a perfect health. Very often the case that the patients get tired of long suffering and give up for the complete recovery on the way to it, in consequence of which get the diseases to come back, or complications to set in.

But, in the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, patients are allowed even for kakke (beri-beri) or acute catarrh of the colon ordinary diet, therefore they do not get enfeebled, and can recover to health so well as able to engage in the business at same time with the cure of the diseases. There are no possibilities of the patients giving up the treatment on the way, or getting the complications which usually set in through general weakness.

It would be endless if I have to enumerate all special features of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.

Lastly: Let me hope the medical doctors of the world to pay due considerations on this new treatment from foregoing few remarks I have given.

Herewith another Japanese odes:—

(Literal translation)

- (1) May be the god-work the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, which in an instant cures diseases.
- (2) It is a pity for brethern who suffer and agonize from sickness not knowing the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment.
- (3) All sick-people should try the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment which will cure you too.

Our impressions of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment

by

Mr. Tatsuo Kuroda (age 32),

Master of Arts.

I make it a great delight to write about the impressions of the grand treatment of Dr. Fujii from the facts as experienced by me, so as to inform it to the public by being inserted on the space of the second edition and the English translation of the book "To Physicians of the World" now under publication, the first edition of which had been previously published by Dr. Fujii treating on his new and a revolutionary treatment invented after many years painful investigations, also as an alarm-bell to the medical doctors of the world, who are blindly sticking to the modern medication treatment and cannot get out of it.

I remember it was late in autumn of 1926, that I and my wife became acquainted with Dr. Fujii for the first time, not as patients but as friends through kind introduction of some one of our mutual acquaintances. We frequently dined together and became gradually intimate, fascinated by his pure and simple character with ardour and direct judgement.

From the beginning of our acquaintance he explained to us of his treatment, but at the time, we confess that we did not listen to it with much interest, as we were not only laymen but had been deeply familiar with the modern medical science and its rationality. In short, we thought that, however great the reason of a thing may be, it would be useless unless proved in practice, especially so with the art of curing diseases. In fact we had no personal experience of his treatment, therefore, we were doubting of it. Before becoming in belief of the theory that he explained to us, we had chance upon experiencing his treatment, from which we were able to grasp the indisputable proof of its marvellous efficacy just as he claims.

It was the first part of November that year, when we, both I and my wife, had to go out on business toward the evening, leaving our baby of two years old under care of her grand-mother. We returned home at about 11 o'clock p.m., and were surprised to find the baby in an unusual complexion, pale face, no strength at the cheek and mouth, and the eyes lambent. No answer she could speak to our questions, only looking at us listlessly as if a deaf, the temperature taken 6.2° . The grand-mother disclosed timidly at last the secrecy, that she gave the baby a bunch of sweet-orange at first, and as the baby wanted more gave the full bunches of one orange, which the baby took all together with the loculuses. Instantly when I hear this, it struck me that it would be the cholera infantum that the baby is suffering. As I knew an instance of my friend's baby who had died in the morning from same affection by taking a persimmon in the previous evening, I thought I must not lose time. So, I at once hurried to Dr. Fujii with the baby for his treatment.

It was late in the evening, and having no more tram-car traffic hired a taxi, and hurried to Kanda in a dark quiet midnight through the suburban streets, and arrived at Dr. Fujii's at about 1.30 a.m. The doctor, though already in bed, got up at once and treated the baby. I could notice between the doctor's eyebrows a deep impression of anxiety as to the seriousness of the baby's condition. But the doctor encouraged me by saying "Mr. Kuroda, I guarantee to get it cured". At this word full of self-confidence I felt so grateful as if I sat before the saviour, with great ease and tears of joy.

"Presently," the doctor said pointing at the stomach region of the baby "This large retention in the stomach can by no means be removed at once by laxative or medicines of any kind. You may rely upon me, the retention would be removed before the dawn, then the baby would be out of danger and perhaps nearly cured." This word proved to be true two hours after. The bowels opened, and about two handfuls of the retention, very likely the loculuses of the orange bunches, came out. After that, finding the baby still in a rather feverish condition, the doctor gave another treatment. The baby then began to fall asleep as if relieved from the affliction. At about 10 o'clock a.m., the temperature was lowered and the spirit restored, so well as able to bubble out. Returned home after receiving two more treatments, once in the morning and once in the afternoon. With one more treatment received next day, the baby got quite well, and since then she got far stronger than before, and never since affected with diseases, while she was previously under doctor's care almost constantly from indigestion.

About one week ago, or three years since the above treatment was received, she happened to injure the digestive organs from over-eating, and again received the treatment of Dr. Fujii. It was so bad as the medical doctor commended not to give any food except the rice soup cooked quite thin. But Dr. Fujii told me that children are growing up with great vigour, hence must be given a sufficient food and treated on the affection without any regard to the food. For this reason, we may give her a thick rice soup after first treatment, but after the second usual food should be given. We followed this instruction and the baby got quite well after three more treatments.

We can see the fundamental difference between this and the medical treatments, the one being the positive treatment giving sufficient food, and the other the negative keeping the stomach empty.

Besides the baby, my own affection of acute diarrhoea and my wife's throat catarrh and tonsilitis had been cured. That is the sufficient proof of the wonderful efficacy this treatment possesses. I regret I cannot relate fully of numerous other experiences, as it would be too long to write about. Shortly speaking, this wonderful treatment invented by Dr. Fujii, a man of high character, is more than a human achievement.

How blest we are in my family

by

Mr. Yu Matsuda (age 29),

The First Bank, Ltd.

HEARING it from Mr. Baiko Onoye, my mother received Dr. Fujii's kind treatment for the first time in last spring, for the sciatica and the obesity of many years, and has been cured with his treatment without taking any medicines. Next, my own nasal catarrh and weak stomach and intestines, and my wife's mastitis and the tympanitis came from tonsilitis, and my eldest son's bronchitis, 3 years of age at the time, have been cured solely with his treatment. Since then, no one of my family has taken any medicines. How greatly we are blest, no-body can tell at sight.

Other day when I met at the doctor's office with Mrs. Sugimura, wife of late Japanese Ambassador at Berlin, I was told by her that, her case of mastitis was just bad as my wife's, caused at first from the teat bitten by the infant when giving the breast, which caused terrible shiver of body with the teeth chattering, temperature more than 39°, unbearable pain at the affected part extending to neck and back. Words fail to describe the agony. Mrs. Sugimura had to receive a great surgical operation and was subjected to more than 2 months laid-up in sick-bed under the agony. Contrary to this, my wife in the same condition of the suffering has been relieved with only 3 times treatment of Dr. Fujii, and became so well as was able to go herself to his office for further treatment, and after 3 days more of the treatment cured completely well. It surprised Mrs. Sugimura very much, and more so when I told her that my wife was pregnant at the time.

When we sat for dinner last evening, we just came to a topic of that leading actor of the national play of new school, Mr. Shojiro Sawada, who has died quite recently from the tympanitis in consequence of tonsilitis after surgical operation, whereas my wife's tympanitis which was just as bad, with temperature as high as 40°, has been cured under Dr. Fujii with only 5 days treatment, first 2 days in sick-bed at home and next 3 days at his office. We feel greatly sorry for Mr. Sawada having had no karma-relation with Dr. Fujii, but on the contrary we were very lucky and blessed to have known Dr. Fujii at very right time, and are thanking very much to Dr. Fujii, also to Mr. and Mrs. Onoye, the recommenders of this valuable treatment.

Hoping the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment will spread as home treatment

by

Mr. Manzo Tanino (age 45),

Director of the Chosen Chuo Bussan Kabushiki Kaisha, Ltd., Member of Keijo School Assembly.

IT was some 18 years ago that I first knew Mr. Momotaro Fujii (surnamed Gentai Fujii). At that time, there was held an election contest in the district of the island of Tsushima, for the membership of the Parliament, between the candidates, Mr. Tetsuya Hayakawa, Mr. Nitsunan Fukumoto, and Mr. Takesaburo Uchida. The contest was rather furious. Mr. M. Fujii was then practising in Fukuoka city the acupuncture and moxibustion, besides the teacher of swordsmanship. Chivalrous as he was, he conceded to the request of one of the parties of Mr. Uchida to back the latter candidate, and went oversea to the Tsushima Island, putting aside his own professions as above. He made ardent speeches wherever he went in support of Mr. Uchida, and was received with great applause. He was then 23 years of age. But unfortunately Mr. Uchida was defeated by Mr. Hayakawa and had to withdraw to Keijo City, Chosen. At the earnest request of Mr. Uchida, he removed over to Keijo City, where he was appointed the secretary of the Mankan Jitsugyo Kyokai (Manchuria and Chosen Industrial Association) and the editor of its organ "Industry of Manchuria and Chosen", both of which were under the management of Mr. Uchida. A few days after, I also joined the above Association and Magazine as his companion in same position. That was the beginning of the friendly relations entered into between the two.

As if born under the same star, Mr. Fujii and I among many companions became specially intimate day after day, thus I was able to know very well of his personality, that he is kind to friends, simple and indifferent to gains, daring in spirit and spotless in integrity, and sincere to doings having strong will to carry through the object, etc. Hence, I entertained great prospect for his future, and more so when I learned from him that, it was so early as his middle school ages that he set for investigation of medical science, in consequence of having gone through in himself bitter experiences of sickness, which made him entertain great doubt as to the efficacies of the medication treatment. So far as I hear, he was in his youth indulged, availing all vacant hours, in the comparative study of occidental and oriental medical sciences, and how in the primitive ages they used to cure diseases, etc., instead of being addicted to youthful follies.

Mr. Fujii resigned the post of above Association in August of his 25th year of age, for the reason that he wanted to devote himself for writing books. A few months after, he wrote "Treatise on Mental Culture", "Treatise on Hygiene", and "Treatise on Medical Art, Acupuncture and Moxibustion." Soon after completed these writings, he started an Infirmary of the Acupuncture and Moxibustion by the name of Saiseido (House of Life Saving) at 3 chome, Honcho, Keijo city, under the backing of his friends in the City. His accurate judgement and miraculous treatment became at once known all round, and day after day more prosperous, so much as always crowded with the patients gathered from whole Chosen to receive his treatment.

Nevertheless, he closed up the Infirmary by inserting announcement in the Keijo Nippo to the effect that he should suspend it for the present for the reason to devote himself to the writing of some books. I heard it on my journey, and thought he should not do so, because it was so prosperous and there would be no necessity in him to suspend his treatment entirely, but he would be able to engage in the writing along with the treatment, which might be practised say for day time or half day only, otherwise those patients now under his treatment would be sorry to hear it.

So I knocked, directly upon my return to City, at his closed up door in order to sound his opinion about it. His answer was this: "It would require a man of virtue in order to lead a wicked man into path of righteousness, while looking at the medication treatment and the acupuncture and moxibustion, we shall find in the one poison quells poison and in the other they give painfulness or hurt to patient, as if to lead a wicked man with a wicked man, and either of these cannot be called a truly advanced treatment; and if ever any truly advanced treatment should come out, it must be a such one as gives no secondary reactions or painfulness or hurt to patient, but can treat and cure diseases in sure, simple, easy and prompt manner".

Further he said, "Even dogs or cats know how to cure their sickness by themselves to a certain extent, hence it should be much more so with human being, who knows his own sickness better than anybody else, and he should be used to cure his sickness by himself except in some few cases where surgical operation is necessary, otherwise he would be inferior even to dogs or cats, and should be ashamed to be called the lord of the creation. The reason why the infirmary has been closed up is for devoting his whole time to the solution of the above subject in question, and the carrying into effect such way of the treatment as above in view, so that to contribute towards human happiness, and for that great purpose he cannot be rest satisfied with the present small success, taking no account of either criticism or sacrifice of praise''.

Hearing this, I was taken by new surprise at his great discernment and high aspirations as ever he entertains. But mere acquaintances of his took him for an eccentric or a strange man, or else an idealist to praise or an airmonger to condemn him.

In the fall of the 8th year of Taisho (1919), when whole city was in rage of influenza, there was an acquaintance of his who was infected with same after already having lost 4 persons in the family by the rage, and no one of his friends dared to approach to the family fearing of the infection. Upon hearing this, he, so sympathizing as he was, ran for the rescue, and spent 4 days for the treatment and nursing, staying there over nights almost without rest. In consequence of the fatigue he himself was caught with influenza, which was so serious as once apprehended as dangerous. After got well, he wrote a diary of sick-bed entitled "From Death to Life", and taking with him the draft copy of it he left Keijo City for Tokyo in a very high spirits. That was his 29th year of age.

Since then, nothing whatever had been heard of him until October of the 15th year of Taisho (1926), when he turned up in Keijo as guest to the Viceroy of Chosen, Viscount Saito. On that occasion, I knew for the first time his invention of the Press-Stimulation Treatment. At the reception held jointly by some of the officials and private persons of the City at the Restaurant Kagetsu, I heard from him the tales of bitter experiences gone through for the invention, and I was bursted with infinite emotion and felt deepest respect for his perseverance and incessant efforts made during so long intervals against all difficulties, until finally carried through his object, which is for the sake of humanity.

His stay in Keijo City was for about one month, during which time he treated many officials and private persons, such as H. E. the Viceroy Viscount Saito and his madam, Marquis Bokuei-ko, Mr. Ikuta, chief of the Department for Internal Affairs, Mr. Yamazaki, Secretary to the Privy Council of Chosen, Mr. Fujiwara, Private Secretary to the Viceroy, etc. All these gentlemen were astonished at the efficacy of the treatment which is so great for the simplicity of the way.

When he was leaving Keijo, the railway platform was filled with crowds of the people giving him a send-off. On the Keijo Nippo appeared a lengthy editorial article under the heading "Thanks to the Viceroy Saito and Farewell to Dr. Gentai Fujii." I was infinitely delighted to witness those conditions and had to tender sincere congratulations as if it was my own success. But, as I was then extremely busy, besides I had no particular illness, I had not a chance to receive his treatment, but I thought I would be able to receive it anytime if needed in Tokyo, where I visit more than often in a year on business either official or private.

Up turned the chance, however, when I was staying in Tokyo in latter part of January in the 3rd year of Showa (1928), I was affected with orchitis and at once received his treatment. Whilst under the first one treatment the painfulness had instantly been stopped, became better and better as treatment went on, and after 15-16 times completely cured. Again in middle of March same year, I suffered, while staying in Tokyo, from furious nervous pain at the neck extending over occipital region, in addition to the weakness of stomach and intestines caused after peptic ulcer. These affections had also been cured beautifully with 17-18 times treatment. I said to him, grasping his hands tight, that it seems to me the principle he insists upon "All diseases are due to one single source" has been fully justified by the fact that, though the above two my affections were of different diseases but were cured all the same with one single instrument. I cannot but wonder, though it may be the crystal of hard labour for many years, at the fact that such a great invention could have been achieved by him so successfully.

Since then, every time when I went over to Tokyo on business, I made it my greatest pleasure to receive his treatment a few times even when I had no particular disease. Sometimes when I miss the treatment, owing to the shortness of my stay or otherwise prevented by business, I find marked difference in my constitution after returned to Keijo. Therefore, I decided to make it a rule hereafter to receive the treatment with every effort.

When I think of Mr. Fujii, who is living far distant from Chosen, I feel envious of the Tokyo citizens who are so fortunate to have him in their own city, and impatiently hope, as is aspired by Mr. Fujii, to see the time comes when the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment will be made a home treatment in general household.

A great discovery of the curing-art of diseases meritorious even more than Edward Jenner

by

Mr. Yataro Tsuboi,

A disciple of Dr. Fujii.

The following is the article appeared in the local magazine "Nagasaki Prefecture" of March 15th, 1929, presided by Mr. Kenji Harada, noted for his knowledge of Italian literature:—

REGARDLESS of rich or unrich, human being is constantly pursued by the threat of diseases so long as life time. Hence, if he should get out of the threat by some means or other, his happiness would be beyond anything. It must be the greatest ideal of human being to live the span of life in healthy and sound condition, with least fear of diseases.

Great advance is said to have been made in the medical science and art in the world, and Japan is also thought by her people to have something which is even superior and can be boast of to the rest of the world. However, let me ask if the people of Japan have been placed absolutely free from the threat or uneasiness of diseases, or in any way the number of sick-people has been reduced.

In other words, if a man gets affected say with cold, is it so much advanced as he can be cured of the cold assuredly and with least apprehension of being affected with pneumonia or some other complications? Again, against prevalent infectious diseases, can we place absolute reliance upon the present medical doctors to get free of the uneasiness of the infection?

I am sorry to say that all these uneasinesses have not in the least been removed. Therefore, I can conclude to the effect that the medical treatment, which is said to have advanced, has not advanced at all in reality, if we consider it from the curing effect.

The reason why I state so much about it is for nothing, but because by practising myself upon various patients I have recognized the marvellous true merit of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, which is really an ideal treatment considering from its curing effect, standing far above the modern medical science and art, which are full of regrets.

I have had least knowledge or experience of the medical science or curing art, yet why I came to engage in this treatment as Dr. Fujii's disciple are that, being intimate with him I was usually paying a high respect to his opinion and his practical treatment; that, I was in the belief of its being the most advanced and surpassed treatment that all human being can rely upon, judging from the actual fact that I was previously saved from the serious affection almost instantly with this treatment (refer to page 48 "To Physicians of the World"); and that, this treatment can be practised with only one simple instrument by anybody, if he is taught how and where to apply it, being so simple as one can learn it today and be a good doctor next day, besides so useful as one can use it for his own affections by himself as well as for others.

As long as the medical science is the basis of the medical art, and the latter is the application of the science into practice for the rescue of human being from sickness, the medical art must have for its chief object the cure of diseases of mankind. Therefore, any such medical art as cannot effect the cure can by no means be respected and relied upon as the curing art, unless as for the part of zoological science. Anyhow, it cannot be denied that in the practical efficacy the modern medical science and art are very much regrettable.

In such state of the time, our Dr. Fujii has invented a new practical therapy of a curing-standard, basing on the principle of "All diseases are due to one single source." I think we must pay a high respect to him on behalf of the human being in general.

Dr. Fujii's treatment is done by only one instrument, hence it is very simple and to the point, and such is the principal feature of this treatment. At the beginning, when I came to learn this treatment under Dr. Fujii as first disciple with least knowledge of curing art, I gave a question to him as this: "Though I can see very well from your actual treatment, so far up to this date, that your judgement as as well as the cure of diseases are almost miraculous, but would it not be a hard task for a dilettante like myself to be taught with the art, and trained so as to become able to engage in the practical treatment so to effect such marvellous cure?" To this question, Dr. Fujii answered me that such apprehension would be groundless, because the instrument itself possesses the curing power, hence any one who becomes the possessor of the instrument will become the curer. Thus, I was taught by him very kindly with the use of the instrument, how and what parts to apply it. After having finished the course of the instruction, I set to try this instrument on various diseases, with very much expectation and interest to investigate the true value of it.

Of course, from the importance of taking patient's life in charge, I have had to obtain necessary knowledge of general medical science under Dr. Fujii, and the Government licence necessary for the practice.

The first patient I came across was a farmer's wife, for years laid up in sick-bed, said occasionally become crazy, therefore embarrassing the rest of the family. She had been of course under some noted medical doctor as much as could afford to do so economically, and was given medicines for a pretty long interval untiringly, but the doctor could not do her any good only waiting till naturally recover in her brain, where was said the cause of the affection was lying.

Following after the motto Dr. Fujii usually instructs us that "diseases must be examined and treated at the abdominal parts first as rudiment, and then extend to other parts," I examined her at the abdomen carefully and found out that her affection was due to the slackness of the intestines caused after delivery, and I gave the treatment chiefly on the abdominal parts. Of course being impossible for me to foretell the result, I visited her next day with the feeling somehow near anxiety, but to my great astonishment and joy she was found so well as out on the verandah helping other people in drying some cereal in the sun. Three more treatments cured her quite healthy and sound like an ordinary person. All of the family were so glad as to say that they met with a spring time after three years. I was astonished even at myself to have effected such a marvellous cure with this instrument, on such a serious affection by the hand of the unaccustomed practitioner like myself.

Since then it is already three years. During these intervals I attended various sick-people, and almost every one of them placed with me with similar gratitude with the above, in almost innumerable cases, such as stomach and intestinal diseases, uterus affections, typhlitis, pneumonia, rheumatism, neuralgia, and all other diseases either acute or chronic. In some cases, the tonsilitis, with which a man was affected so bad as even a drop of water could hardly pass the throat, was cured after only 3 times treatment; the acute muscular inflammation, which as a rule accompanies high temperature more than 40° , requiring at least 40 days stay in a hospital to get the surgical operation of even up-to-date doctor, leaving a scar of 4-5 inches behind after getting well, were cured and the temperature lowered a few hours after the treatment was over, which was but once. It was often the case that we both the patient and myself had to wonder at the achievement. Wherever the instrument touches no diseases are allowed to hide.

One thing more which I investigated with particular interest was of the general constitution of the children of school ages. There are a good many of them who are observed as poorly nutritioned, whereas they are now-a-days taken sufficient care of in the families as to the food sustenance as well as the bodily exercises. Such children when grown up would be placed in unfortunate position on account of the weak constitution. The fact that these weakly children can be improved by the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, if applied in their infancy or school ages, must be a great subject for the nation's sanitation.

Generally speaking, the poor nutrition arises from incapability of obtaining necessary food under various circumstances, or else is due to the functional debility of the various organs in the body where hormone is produced. The organs where produce the hormone are enumerated pituitary body, pineal gland, parathyroid epithelium, thymus, suprarenal capsule, pancreas, testes, ovary, pyloric region of stomach, mucous membrane of duodenum, prostate, and in the brain. For these organs, medicines can in no way influence upon to enhance their functions, and that is the reason why the medical doctors cannot do any good for the weakly children.

In such medical impossibility, the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment can be applied most efficaciously. Therefore, should school masters or school doctors of whole Japan come to make use of this treatment for school children or second nation, advantages of the nation as well as the individuals would be immense. Considering the above sanitary advantages in addition to the wonderful efficacy on various diseases, I may say that the importance of this treatment is so great and cannot be overlooked.

Since I started to engage in this treatment, I received very often the question from several of the intellectual class of people that "Recently the medication treatment became generally thought as deadlocked, and many a doctor is investigating how to get out of it, and in such time it is really worth congratulation for the general happiness that Dr. Fujii has invented such a new treatment on the principle of "all diseases are due to one single source." However, for the diseases such as dysentery, scarlet fever etc. which are said to arise from the propagation of the bacteria inside the human body, how could it be possible to kill the pathogenic bacteria by applying this treatment from outside the body?" As laymen they may be right to raise such a question, but it is a groundless apprehension.

Why? Because, though most of the public believe as if it is the medicine, that kills direct those bacilli of the dysentery or cholera, by being taken into inside the body, but it is not correct. It is dangerous for a man to take bactericide into the internal organs of the body in order to kill the morbid bacilli. The solution of corrosive sublimate or carboric acid might kill the bacilli, but at the same time might kill the man. There is no medicine found yet which can kill only the bacilli without afflicting the man who takes it, is there?

Our human bodies are by nature so invested with the power as to kill the bacilli if they get in. We are not always to get affected with say dysentery by even swallowing the bacilli of dysentery, because we have in our own body the power to kill them. Even if affected, we have to fight against them and win, that is to say, by stimulating the slackened nervous functions so as to increase the anti-toxine in our blood with some positive measure so that no bacilli can stand to live or propagate. The Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is the ideal one in effecting such result in a simple, easy and positive way. Bacterial affections such as dysentery, scarlet fever, etc. can be cured almost without exceptions in a very short interval before the patient gets enfeebled. Thus this treatment has marvellous efficacy not only for all common diseases either acute or chronic, but for almost all infectious diseases, and from these facts I may say that Dr. Fujii should be meritted more than Dr. Edward Jenner, who is praised for the discovery of the vaccination only.

Further, one thing more at which I was struck with admiration and must not forget to mention is the clear-sight of Dr. Fujii in allowing patients of any diseases to take sufficient food whilst under his treatment, because unless they are given sufficient nutrition they would get enfeebled thereby quick and perfect cure could not be expected. Most of the people in Japan are taking a wrong view against such clear reasoning, and all classes, both high and low, think that they must reduce the quantity of meals or keep away from it as much as possible whenever affected with sickness, and that, in doing so it is the best hygiene for recuperation. Such wrong thought was originally infected deep in the bosom of the people ever since Dr. Beltz introduced medical art into Japan. I must say that such thought is old fashioned and it shows the lack of common sense in the medical treatment.

Dr. Fujii, my respected teacher, regretting the above fact, has been haranguing for more than ten years about the absurdity of either reduction or abstinence of meals. At first many a people took it as curious, but at present there are seen not a few even among noted medical doctors who became awoken, such as Dr. Junjiro Shimazono of the Tokyo Imperial University taking the course to give patients as much food as possible, also Dr. Iwao Matsuno of the Kyoto Imperial University stating that the old way was wrong and must give even a patient of the typhoid fever some food so as to prevent from getting enfeebled. The time has now turned up so far in favour of Dr. Fujii's opinion.

Thus the medical doctors are gradually approaching to the insistence of Dr. Fujii, yet the present medical art is quite incapable of the means how to give diet to a patient who is unable to take it or not strong enough to digest and assimilate it. In the Fujii's treatment, the stomach and the intestinal functions can be stimulated in a most natural manner, or in short, by a very simple treatment any patient who are losing appetite in consequence of sickness can be made appetitive and able to take sufficient diet, thus can treat on his sickness without making him enfeebled. Therefore we can see, even in this respect only, the superiority of this treatment to the modern medical arts, being by far advanced and efficacious.

Human body is said necessary to take 2,000 calorific food in a day in an ordinary health of 50 kilos weight, or 1,500 even in a patient laying down quietly. Now, if he were to be nourished with cow's milk only, it would require 1 sho

(0.48 standard gallon) or more milk a day estimating 1 go (0.048 standard gallon) at 130 calories; or if with the rice soup omogu only, it would require 1.8 sho of omoyu taking 1 go at 8 calories; or if with eggs only, 20 pieces at 70 calories per egg. It would be a matter of impossibility to give to a sick-people or even a healthy people so large a quantity of either milk, omoyu or egg every day. On the other hand it would be quite plain that any less quantity of either one of those soft foods would be inadequate and not do any good. It is why Dr. Fujii is always insisting on the patient refraining from soft food but taking ordinary diet for any diseases, thus to effect the cure so easily. The existence of a treatment having such practical curing power must be a great gospel to sick-people.

I was the first disciple under Dr. Fujii, and became one of the wonderers at the greatness of his treatment after using it myself on various diseases. The fact that such a great invention of a redemptive treatment has been achieved by a Japanese must be the pride of our nation, which has been for more than 2,500 years since making the spiritual culture the national policy. How great the happiness of humanity would be both spiritually and bodily when this treatment should extend over the whole world. I am quite sure that in such time Dr. Momotaro Fujii's name will become brilliant and remain forever with the world's reverence as a physical saint.

The appearance of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is an epoch-making event in the history of human being

by

Mr. Fukuzo Iwai (age 31),

A disciple of Dr. Fujii.

WITH the advance of human intellect and with various experiences of individuals, people generally became aware of the fearfulness of the secondary reaction of medicines which being injurious rather than beneficial, and naturally the people's confidence in the medication treatment is now generally shading away. The thing one most troubles himself, when affected with sickness, would be the want of the treatment which will cure his affection quickly and assuredly. In most cases, he loses a long time before striking a reliable treatment, consequently even a sickness considered slight is often involuntarily led to a serious one, or, if not serious, will leave him for a long time in the pain of sickness.

I myself was one of the long sufferers of chronic stomach and intestinal diseases for over twenty years, having cause to the dysentery affected after acute catarrh of the colon when I was young. Almost all medical treatment and various ways of recuperation had been tried, but did me no good. In spite of taking sufficient nutritious food, my abdomen was so thin and flat as if stuck to the back-bones, and never come forward causing intestinal adhesion.

Upon recommendation of a friend of mine I received Dr.

Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment, and have been cured perfectly well after three months, the abdomen expanded, the digestive and assimilative functions gained, the feeling of the food sitting heavy on the stomach disappeared, and became to feel self which I have not had for many years.

Next, my elder brother who was affected with acute catarrh of the colon, for which though he consulted a medical doctor immediately when he kept bed, but it did him no good, the temperature rising gradually as high as 39° or more, and the bloody stools increased to 48 times a day and was suspected as dysentery. Two days after kept bed he received Dr. Fujii's treatment. By the first one treatment the pain and bloody stools which were so fearful have been stopped, and at the same time the high temperature has been lowered down, the colour of the face gained, and became so well as able to talk with a smile and became appetitive in due course. Previous to this treatment his face was pale, having had no food or beverage for two days. Dr. Fujii told us that "I am not a man only to examine the sickness but to cure it, therefore you may rely upon and follow all my advice. The patient is at present very weak and exhausted, and in order to make him quickly recover from the weakness he must be given usual meals from next morning after one more treatment, giving rice-okayu cooked rather thick only for today, and from the day after next he may come to my office in person for further treatments."

Thus he followed Dr. Fujii's instructions, and was found not only no afflictions were felt but heartened up. Thus, four days after kept bed, he was able to go to Dr. Fujii's office at Kanda on the street tram-car from his residence at Mikawashima, suburb, and has been cured quite well after three more treatments,—five treatments in all including first two days treatments at his residence, of course taking no medicines at all. It was on the third day since kept bed, that the patient was able to get up on the sick-bed, and related whole account of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment to the medical doctor who then visited him. The doctor was surprised from heart saying "it would be not long before medical doctors ceases to be necessary in this world if such a new treatment should appear."

Next, when I heard that in my relative's family there were four children all affected with the scarlet fever and laid up side by side, I immediately asked Dr. Fujii to come and cure them. By about five visits for the treatment he has cured all three patients quite well, who had the temperature as high as 38°-40° respectively. You cannot imagine how much I was thanked by their parents.

So far I have experienced the Fuji's Press-Stimulation Treatment, first on my chronic disease and then on acute diseases of my elder brother and relative's children, and knew that the greatness of said treatment is more than heard of. Thereupon, I was aroused to serve myself for the sake of sick-people by becoming the disciple of Dr. Fujii. Fortunately my earnest petition was granted.

For over two years since, I have received his kind instructions. The first chance I was allowed to attend myself as treater under his direction was on the person of my younger sister, who was for the first time in the family way, and required to be relieved from the pain and ensured of easy delivery. I gave thirteen times treatment till the delivery. According to the obstetrics of to-day, the labour-hours of the first parturition are usually nine sometimes eighteen hours. In spite of such usual habit, my younger sister never felt fatigue from household works as the result of this treatment, and the labour-hours were only thirty minutes from the beginning of labour, with but slight labour-pain, and was delivered with ease of a child soon after the dehiscence. It surprised even the midwife into admiration.

Next, a wife of a friend of mine, who was diagnosed by a medical doctor as puerperal fever, the temperature rising as high as 39° two days after the delivery, and the recovery was said questionable, consequently the husband was in great pessimism and the wife in great agony from the sickness, with the child crying for the breast. As I could not bear to see the above pitiful condition, I stopped at his house three nights over and gave 8 times treatments, at the end of which she has been recovered quite well, and the milk began to run. I was thanked by them, saying "Through your kind treatment both the parent and child have been saved from death."

Next, the typhlitis of a friend of mine, for which he was just going to receive surgical operation. I have cured him with only 15 times treatment.

Next, the acute articular rheumatism of my acquaintance, from which he was unable to turn his body for about one month since kept bed, and the daily meals were helped to every time by the hand of some one of the family with a spoon. Cured quite well with 25 treatments.

Next, the acute nephritis of my acquaintance, dropsical all over the body. Cured with 27 treatments.

All of them tendered me thanks almost indiscribable.

Since then, I applied the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment every day on numerous patients of various diseases, and seeing the efficacies being so great I often gaze at the little instrument with a wonder. Of those numerous patients I will give a few remarkable cases :—

(1) Kakke (beri-beri). Up to this time, kakke is considered a toxicosis of refined-rice meal, or is due to the absence of vitermin B in the refined-rice. But, according to my respected teacher Dr. Fujii, kakke has its cause to the slack or weakness of the nerves scattered in the stomach, therefore it can be cured by restoring the slackened stomach in order, hence no necessity of refraining from refined-rice meals. So I always allowed the patients the refined-rice meals and cured them.

(2) Acute nephritis and diabetes mellitus. Doing away with milk and bread, I allowed the patients to take usual meals, and cured them all right.

(3) High fever, such as pneumonia, typhoid fever, etc. Even for these patients I always treated by making them take usual meals. Thus the patients never got weak or affected with complications, hence the cure were marvellous.

(4) Gonorrhœa. Either acute or chronic I cured all. For gonorrhœa and acute nephritis I always get the urine examined by special doctors every 5 or 7 days, and confirmed whether gonococcus in the former and albuminuria in the latter have been removed clean or not, before stopping the treatment.

(5) Typhlitis. Once cured by this treatment never come back. Surgical operation is absolutely unnecessary.

(6) Acute catarrh of the colon. However largely one may suffer from bloody-stools, first treatment once or twice have made him take usual meals, and cure was sure.

Briefly speaking, the principle of my respected teacher Dr. Fujii in treating all diseases is to effect it without making the patients weakened in the general constitution during the course of treatment. We the disciples are following his instructions and find there are absolutely no cases where patients get complications so long as this treatment being received. I believe the above few examples are quite sufficient to show that the appearance of the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment is an epoch-making event in the history of humanity in this world.

I wish to mention here that my respected teacher Dr. Fujii is always offering morning prayer for nothing else but the success to make all people in the world the doctors for their own sickness.

Number of Medical Hakushi (M. D.) increases but sick-people never decreases, and medical science advances but diseases are never cured. Such is the cry at heart of the deploring sick-people of the world. At this time when the present medical art is so much in a deadlock, I believe the Fujii's Press-Stimulation Treatment must be the right subject for the medical doctors of the world for serious investigations prior to anybody else. I deeply feel so, and can declare it without fear from what I have experienced, learned and investigated, scientifically and practically, first as patient and afterwards as disciple of Dr. Fujii.
